44th Bach Festival program is announced at Carmel reception

By BABS COROVESSIS

THE CONCERT PROGRAM for the 44th Bach Festival, to be held in Carmel July 18 through Aug. 2, was announced Monday night by Sandor Salgo, music director and conductor for the festival.

Salgo and his wife, Priscilla, who is director of the festival chorale and assistant conductor, unveiled the 1981 schedule during a reception at the Carmel Art Association attended by 200 season ticket holders, local festival contributors, volunteers and friends of the festival.

The festival, which had its origins in a series of concerts in Carmel in 1932 by Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous, has expanded to a 17-day event to honor baroque music and the genius of Johann Sebastian Bach, who wrote more than 200 cantatas, sonatas, fantasias, preludes, fugues, toccatas and 143 chorale preludes. His works include compositions in each of the 24 major and minor keys.

This year's festival will have its traditional opening night with an all-Bach program for single ticket holders. All performances will be at Sunset Theater in Sunset Center except for performances July 22 and July 29 at Carmel Mission Basilica.

The festival, which began in 1935 with a four-day season, will give a detailed schedule of 12 recitals when brochures are mailed out in mid-April to local residents interested in being single ticket holders.

Tickets for local residents will be sold May 4 through May 8 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Room 11 of Sunset Center.

Season ticket orders costing $60, $72 and $84 are being accepted at the festival office through March 31.

SALGO, speaking to friends of the festival for about 30 minutes Monday, thanked Sunset Center "for subsidizing our rent," and noted that the festival operates at a loss, which is made up by contributors. "The festival operates with love and affection," Salgo said.

Salgo, who has been music director and conductor of the festival since 1956, said his month prior to announcing the scheduled program was one of "agony, ecstasy, everything."

He quoted Stravinsky, who once remarked that "the only way to escape from the 20th century was to return to Bach."

He recalled to the audience how 26 years ago he was told by festival organizers that it was a baroque festival and that anything of that period could be presented. However, it was stressed to him, he said, that "the greatest amount of time has to be with Johann Sebastian."

He said in selecting a program, the reality and the dreams and the logistics all have to be worked out. Thus, he said, "Life is like an opera, full of compromise."

SALGO then played a recording of the prologue to The Passion of St. Matthew, which he called "the most perfect Bach Mass."

Salgo said Charles Bressler will perform the evangelist role. He termed him "the best

Senior citizens enjoy a bit of graciousness at weekly high tea

By FLORENCE MASON

"HIGH TEA," adding to the quality of life for a number of Carmel's senior citizens, is a weekly feature at the Carmel Foundation.

It is only one of many activities and programs offered at the Foundation, but it is very special — both for those who attend and those who work to make it happen each Wednesday afternoon.

According to Executive Director Betty Plank, holding gracious teas has been part of the organization's program ever since the Foundation has had a building. That takes it back to the early 1950s. When the Foundation was in "a little old redwood cottage," there was one room holding a maximum of 37 people; by using the adjacent lounge, 50 could be accommodated. Money for that original room was given by Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services, an organization whose support has continued through the years. A desk, typewriter and other office equipment are more recent gifts.

Now the large multi-purpose room (Diment Hall) is used both for the program that precedes the tea and for the tea itself.

Librarian resigns

By BABS COROVESSIS

JO CHILDERS, head librarian at Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel for five years, turned in her resignation to the library board Tuesday, March 24.

Mrs. Childers resigned effective May 1 during an executive session held by the board after its regular monthly meeting.

Mrs. Patricia Faul, board president, said at the time the closed session was for "personnel matters."

Mrs. Childers was unavailable for comment yesterday. A library employee said Mrs. Childers did not wish to "speak with any newspaper people."

Mrs. Faul said yesterday that the library board will meet in executive session at 4 p.m. Tuesday, March 31, to appoint an acting librarian.

Alice Terrell, children's librarian, and Peg Richter, reference librarian, both are being considered for Mrs. Childers' position, Mrs. Faul said.

Mrs. Childers joined the library staff in September 1975 after being the director of a two-county library system in Florida.

SHE HAD experienced conflict with some of the board members in recent months over several issues including book selection procedures, art objects, the entire library book stock and management questions.

In recent weeks, Mrs. Faul had sought to have an orderly procedure approved by the board to evaluate the head librarian in an objective way rather than through the subjectivity of individual board members.

DR. FRANCIS HERRICK, vice president of the board, said yesterday that Mrs. Childers submitted her notice to "retire."

He said, "It was accepted with thanks for her services as director of the library."

Asked if she resigned in anticipation of being removed from her position, Herrick replied, "I do not know what was behind Mrs. Childers' letter to present a letter of retirement, and I'm not going to ask anybody."

evangelist in America."

The festival also will include several works by Telemann, a friend of Bach, who was born 300 years ago.

The evening when Mozart's opera Don Giovanni is performed will be "with no fringes," said Salgo. "It will just be the music and no costumes." Salgo called it "the opera of all operas."

The maestro said the baroque period was such a treasure of music that one could "always come up with some good things" for programming. "I see no problem until the year 2081," he laughed.

Salgo's voice deepened as he spoke of Bach. "It is difficult to approach the subject of Johann Sebastian," Salgo said. "He reached beyond his age. And baroque is full of excitement, contrast, turmoil and ambiguity." A good representation of that is in Bach's Mass where "the angel calls you with one hand and with the other she pushes you away," he said.

Salgo said Bach was the last great religious artist and his works changed church music.

He reminded the audience that Bach once told one of his children that "the aim and final reason of all our music is to the glory of God and the delight of the human soul."

Janet Morris, president of the festival board, termed the festival "a convivial celebration by those who love to perform and hear this music."

Salgo pointed out that ticket sales cover only 70 percent of the operating expenses of the festival, and that it depends on gifts to make up the difference.

Salgo, who will mark his 26th season with the festival, has been called "a deft, sympathetic conductor" with "an unsurpassing sense of what Bach is up to."

Salgo is music director and conductor of the Marin Symphony and the Modesto Symphony.

Library annex

Architect is selected

THE PROPOSED $1 million annex for Harrison Memorial Library moved another step closer to reality Tuesday, March 24, when the Library Board selected an architect.

The firm of Hall, Goodhue, Haisley and Barker of Monterey was the unanimous choice of the four board members present.

Architect Don Goodhue said he will "wait to hear instructions from the board." Goodhue said several issues — such as parking — need to be resolved before an annex can be designed.

Goodhue estimated construction could start in six to eight months. Schematic design and design refinement will take two to three months, and working drawings another three or four months, he said.

The board had spent several weekends interviewing seven firms for the job.

AFTER THE SELECTION, board President Patricia Faul commented, "I feel like celebrating. It looks like we're going to build something now."

Members present approving the Hall firm were Mrs. Faul, Dr. Francis H. Herrick, Walter Gorey and Bernard Anderson. Steve Crouch was absent, but sent word to the board president of his two top selections. The firm selected was one of the two.

Cost of the contract has not been deter-

Carmel Foundation weekly teas offer variety to aged

There are 10 ceiling speakers in this newer building, so any seat in the room is a good seat.

The 2:30 p.m. program has offered a great variety of entertainment and instruction through the years, but one type has always lured the largest numbers of Foundation members: armchair travel.

Mrs. Plank said "We are very selective about the quality of the slides shown and we are delighted that there is a wealth of excellent material available to us through members and their friends."

Other programs always attracting a large audience are those offering a short play or selections from a play. The Peninsula Players, outgrowth of a Monterey Peninsula College drama class at the Foundation, has performed several times, most recently with a riotous Thurber's Carnival. Also offering dramatic entertainment has been the One-Act Theater of San Francisco. Generous with their musical talents, students from Hidden Valley and students of local music teachers have frequently performed.

NOVEL PROGRAMS spring up, too.

One of the most entertaining in recent weeks, according to Mrs. Plank, was presented by Jo Stallard of Pacific Grove, a bird-watcher "who turned out to be the jolliest, nicest, most humorous person we have had for some time."

On the more practical side, there have been programs on legal matters of special interest to seniors and such issue-oriented subjects as energy conservation, Afghanistan and wild life rehabilitation.

Sometimes a program is canceled at the last minute, but that does not faze the well-organized Mrs. Plank or the program committee.

"We always have a few people up our sleeves," Mrs. Plank said.

For example, the Foundation has available a set of slides and commentary in the Metropolitan Museum series featuring various art subjects.

Average attendance at one of the Wednesday afternoon programs and tea is 80 to 100 men and women; up to the room's maximum of 150 is not uncommon. The afternoon is designed for members and their guests. It is not open to the public. Word of coming attractions comes to the members in their monthly newsletter.

"The tea is a very populat attraction," Mrs. Plank said. "There are dainty sandwiches, cakes and cookies. And of course, tea. We've been told we make the best tea in town. It's made by using a tea essence."

All of that is made possible by the devotion and time given by many people within the Foundation and some concerned people outside it. In addition to those providing the entertainment, there is a program committee that encourages Foundation members to let the chairman know about good speakers or good programs they have heard elsewhere. Then the program committee chairman, Col. Joseph Lacey, and his committee (Jack Pratt, Professor W.D. Duffy and Mrs. Plank) decide which of the suggestions to follow up on, planning well ahead.

Navy Cmdr. L.V. Frieze, a former POW in North Vietnam, spoke to those attending the Carmel Foundation's tea last week about life in the 'Hanoi Hilton.'

A VERY BUSY person each Wednesday, and many days before, is Mrs. Kay Lynch, tea chairman, who is responsible for providing the volunteers and training them to prepare the food and serve it.

There is also a flower committee, providing a floral centerpeice appropriate for the season or occasion. And one of the Foundation's many activity groups contributed in a very special way: One member constructed a second tea table and the wood-carving class added decorative touches.

Two "outside" groups have been making a very special contribution to the Wednesday teas for a number of years. One is the Pi Beta Phi Alumnae Club of the Monterey Peninsula, which provides all the food and a group of servers each Wednesday during March. The organization, whose members represent collegiate sorority chapters all over the country, has its own Foundation tea chairman who lines up contributors of food (or funds) and time. The Pi Phi Wednesdays have become particularly well known for good food as well as for the friendly faces of the workers, and the March teas are always well attended.

Another regular contributor is the Altrusa Club, which provides a special tea annually.

Early this year another Carmel service group — the Lions Club — gave the Foundation $500 for the teas.

The Foundation could use and would welcome more helpers and gifts of money, food or a program, Mrs. Plank said. The Foundation's lace tablecloths, which contribute to the gracious tone of the afternoon, are wearing out; replacements would be received with much appreciation.

New tablecloths or old, the Wednesday teas will continue to attract a large number of guests who appreciate not only the high-quality programs but also the refreshments that follow. Many of those who come dress up just a bit for the occasion, although Mrs. Plank commented that she doesn't see the hats and gloves that were quite common when she first came to the Foundation nearly seven years ago.

"The graciousness and friendliness don't change, however," she said.

City planners find too many signs in restaurant

A BOWL OF CLAM CHOWDER is not all you can get at Flaherty's Fish Market Oyster Bar and restaurant on Sixth Street in Carmel.

According to the Carmel Planning Commission, you also can get an eyeful of about 18 signs advertising the place.

(The Commission allows each business one sign — two in unusual cases or those covered by a grandfather clause.)

Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson said he inspected the restaurant and oyster bar and counted two signs on each door, several on the windows, two on two boards in the restaurant window, several hanging in the corridor between the two buildings and more on the windows at the side.

"I don't think there are any signs on the toilet windows, however," Stephenson commented. "But by my count, there are at least 18."

"ALL THE SIGNS are in good taste," said Planning Director Bob Griggs, "but we can't tell which ones were approved."

Stephenson said owner Flaherty Swanston "wanted to make a deal."

Commissioner Sandy Swain joked, "You mean you'll get free fish dinners?"

Commissioner Donald Davidson said he was sure "the commission knows how I feel about signs. I suggest we disallow any unapproved signs. Eighteen — that's really excessive. His good business is not due to his signs, anyway."

Miss Swain said she had not been aware of the number of signs advertising the business until "I went there and counted them myself. Flaherty's just hit me in the eye everywhere I looked."

Commissioners gave Flaherty until April 1 to submit proper applications — one for each sign requested. The commission indicated Building Inspector Ron Warren will then enforce the city's sign ordinance.

Stephenson said he was responsible for earlier approval of some of the signs, but that the number has grown.

COMMISSIONERS also objected to two signs at a new business, Nautilus, which will open in Doud Craft Studios on San Carlos in the next few weeks.

A representative for the sign applicant, Greg Schafer, produced two large wooden signs with large gold letters and a trident running through the sign.

"It's huge," Davidson exclaimed. "I don't like either sign. I think they will look atrocious."

Commissioner Swain said she had a hard time turning them down after "the poor guy had spent all that money on the signs."

Stephenson said the signs were taken from another Nautilus location and did not cost the owner anything.

"I feel very uncomfortable about them entirely," Davidson insisted.

The commission agreed to look at the signs at the building site to see if they looked out of place or too large. The commission continued the matter and granted temporary approval for one of the signs to be hung or placed in the window until the matter is settled.

In other action, the commission:

✓ Denied an application from The Sweater Corner for a display case.

✓ Approved signs for Lloyd's Shoes on Ocean, Robert John Shop on Lincoln, Carmel Mining and Trading on Mission, Perspectacles on San Carlos, Spencer's at Carmel Plaza, and the London Mercer Inc. on San Carlos.

Carmel sales tax receipts are up

RETAIL SALES activity in Carmel has increased 12 percent in the past 12 months, according to the California State Board of Equalization.

Tax receipts returned by the state to the city for February 1980 through January 1981 totaled $973,640. That compares with $867,049 for the same period a year earlier, a difference of $112,000.

City officials had projected that Carmel sales tax volume would reflect an estimated $98.7 million in retail sales for the year. (One percent of that amount is returned to the city's general fund.) Instead, the actual amount received was about $14,000 less than expected by the city.

The Board of Equalization said Carmel received $86,537 as its estimated one percent share of the $116.7 million allocated during March from local sales taxes. That is the advance payment on the estimated Carmel share of revenue from sales for Feb. 6 through March 8, 1981.

That compares to $86,394 collected for the comparable period in 1980.

Monterey County received $241,197 this month. Other city allocations were Monterey, $176,766; Pacific Grove, $70,714; Seaside, $136,198, and Del Rey Oaks, $7,242.

MORE REGULAR SCHOOL ATTENDANCE URGED

At a recent meeting of the Carmel school board, while the matter of finances was under discussion, the question of the need for better attendance was referred to.

At county headquarters, attendance records are computed very closely. Suppose, for instance, a pupil is tardy five minutes on six occasions during the term — that makes half an hour. If ten children are similarly late — and this does occur — that is nearly a school day lost.

Thus, because of the decreased attendance, the money allowed for maintenance is cut down.

Parents are urged to see that children attending the local school be as regular and prompt as possible.

CHEESE STATISTICS

Statistics compiled by the state dairy bureau show that Monterey is the second largest cheese producing county in California.

With plans complete and specifications drawn and ready for contractors, the Boy Scout clubhouse of Carmel is in its final phase, the actual building. Within a very few days the contract will be let, and the work will begin.

The location is the northeast corner of Mission and Eighth streets, in the business zone, diagonally opposite the big playgrounds of Sunset School.

At the lower side, for it stands on a sloping hill, the building will have two stories. The scoutmaster's office, the dressing rooms with showers and lavatories are downstairs. On the second floor is the assembly room and a kitchen, with arrangements for providing the simple spreads that help make scouting attractive.

A number of Carmelites and residents in the surrounding areas feel that this land should be restricted to residential use.

District attorney wants suit by Peters dismissed

DISTRICT ATTORNEY William Curtis has asked Monterey County Superior Court to dismiss a cross-complaint filed against him by Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley.

In the latest legal maneuver over Curtis' civil lawsuit against Peters, the district attorney asked the court to dismiss the $1.5 million cross-complaint on several grounds.

Curtis argued in a demurrer motion filed Tuesday, March 24, that he was a public official acting within his proper role when he filed the civil suit against Peters last October. A court hearing on Curtis' motion is scheduled for Friday, April 3.

Peters charged in the cross-complaint filed last week that Curtis has misused his authority in the civil suit which charges Peters with failing to properly disclose certain financial dealings. Peters claims that the suit, filed less than a week before the Nov. 3 election, was intended to destroy his political career. He is asking for $1 million in general damages and $500,000 in punitive damages.

The cross-complaint touched off a flurry of new accusations last week, including the revelation that Carmel Valley Ranch developers had performed construction work for Peters at his home on Middle Canyon Road in Carmel Valley.

In a press conference the day after Peters filed his cross-complaint, Curtis announced that he had evidence showing Carmel Valley Ranch provided $5,220 in personal home improvements to Peters in 1978 and mid-1979 while Peters was a member of the county Planning Commission.

Peters, who has been a strong proponent of Carmel Valley Ranch, acknowledged that the improvements were made, but he denied the work was a gift from the developer or a non-interest-bearing loan.

Records obtained through subpoena, however, from Carmel Valley Ranch showed Peters was billed nine separate times and still had not paid for the $5,220 in improvements which included 21 yards of concrete poured for a swimming pool and driveway gravel, Curtis said.

IF THE IMPROVEMENTS constitute a gift or non-interest-bearing loan, Curtis said that Peters should have disclosed them in his financial statements.

Curtis said he will ask the court later to amend his suit against Peters to seek increased penalties — from $106,158 to about $111,000 — to cover the $5,220 in improvements. The civil suit charges that Peters willfully failed to disclose his participation and earnings from a real estate partnership, and free membership in the Carmel Valley Ranch Tennis Club while serving on the Planning Commission.

Peters has maintained that he did nothing wrong ethically nor was compromised by having Carmel Valley Ranch perform the improvements. He said he had the developer do the work after he was unable to obtain another contractor. The delay in paying for the work was caused by personal financial problems, Peters said.

Officials of Landmark Lands Co. of Oklahoma, the developer of Carmel Valley Ranch, said last week that Peters was charged the cost of the work plus 5 percent overhead and 10 percent profit, and that he was being charged interest on the unpaid debt.

Curtis said after filing the demurrer this week that he would meet with officials of Carmel Valley Ranch on March 30 to discuss the debt.

"There's a conflict," Curtis said, "between what the company records show on the debt and what its officials are saying.

"The records indicate that no interest has been charged."

White Oaks in Valley

Condo suit dismissed

A LAWSUIT against the White Oaks condominium project in Carmel Valley Village has been dismissed.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver refused a request for a continuance last week from attorney Alexander Henson.

Based on a state ruling March 13, Silver decided to dismiss the suit which had challenged the county permits issued for the septic tank system in the 38-unit project.

The Regional Water Quality Board had approved a waste discharge permit for the project, declaring the septic tank system adequate.

Henson, on behalf of the Environmental Law Fund, filed an appeal of the water board decision to the State Water Resources Control Board. He argued before Silver that a continuance should be granted in the lawsuit until the higher state board rules on the appeal.

Silver said the suit could always be refiled after the board's decision on the appeal.

A ruling on the appeal is expected within 45 days of the filing last week, Henson said.

Is A Problem Drinker Making Life Unbearable For You?

• Read Every Word

If a problem drinker is hurting you, you can be sure he's hurting himself too – or herself. Alcoholism does not respect sex, age or color. How long can you go on? If you're ready to do something about it, remember this . . . you can help the alcoholic even if he or she doesn't want help.

• What Not to Do

Don't accuse – he or she will never admit to drinking too much. Don't try to reason with the problem drinker. Alcohol abusers are seriously ill, and the illness affects the mind as well as the body.

• What You Can Do

The best thing (and really the only thing) you can do for problem drinkers is to get them to professional help. Fast. The CareUnit Program in your local hospital offers a unique program that works. Given the right environment and an effective treatment program, alcoholism is a treatable disease. We prove it every day. In a few weeks, the problem drinker can look forward to resuming a useful and productive place in society. And you can look forward to a happy, normal life once again.

• How to Begin

Begin by calling your local CareUnit immediately, and talk to a staff counselor. You alone can help the alcoholic. Call now and make an appointment to see a counselor. You needn't be hurt again.

Supervisors meet tomorrow

Draft LCP for Big Sur is due

By STEVE HELLMAN

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors is scheduled to hammer out final policies for the draft Local Coastal Program for Big Sur at 9:30 a.m. Friday, March 27, at the county courthouse, Salinas.

Public comment on the LCP land-use plan was to have been concluded at the supervisors' regular meeting Tuesday, March 24. Following two public hearings last week, the supervisors had yet to receive comment from owners of several large ranches and the developers of some proposed hotel and visitor-serving facilities.

The meeting March 27 will be closed to public comment while the supervisors resolve disputes over development densities, zoning, viewshed policies and other major policies affecting land use along the 72-mile Big Sur coast.

Supervisors interviewed after the public hearings last week indicated that their positions were confirmed on few of the issues.

SUPERVISOR DUSAN PETROVIC of King City said he believed that development credits granted to owners of viewshed parcels should not be negotiable or transferable between landowners.

Supervisor Marc Del Piero of Watsonville said he supported development credits only if incentives are offered to landowners to participate. He did not elaborate, although one incentive would be the ability to sell or transfer the credits to other landowners.

The difference of opinion on development credits between Del Piero and Petrovic indicated the depth of philosophical and technical conflicts that will come to the fore during the March 27 meeting.

Petrovic said, "I'm for development credits in a restricted way. I don't want them totally independent of the land."

He explained that it was fair to grant development credits to a landowner deprived of development rights on his land that can be seen from Highway 1, but he added that the credits should only be applied to other parcels belonging to the landowner.

Development credits would be given to a landowner to increase the development density on a parcel of land that was not otherwise in the viewshed or restricted by other policies. Petrovic said he objected to an allowance for trading or selling the credits to other landowners or developers.

He said, "I don't want them (development credits) to be sold like stocks and made the object of speculation."

If the landowner has no developable parcels on which to use the credits, Petrovic said the density credits should then be applied to viewshed parcels that will be bought by the county as compensation.

Del Piero insisted that because development credits are a new policy, their effectiveness would depend on incentives to participate.

On viewshed policy, Del Piero said the county should go as far as possible to prevent

Plan for Big Sur faces supervisors

"appreciable" development in the viewshed west of Highway 1. He said some innovative home designs could be allowed that did not severely impact the view.

Overall development policy in the LCP may be dictated mainly by the capacity of Highway 1, Del Piero said. If the supervisors, for example, establish a low road capacity level to preserve Big Sur's ambience, it could prevent the development that would otherwise be allowed through zoning and other policies.

The main issues revealed during the hearings last week and which the supervisors will have to wrestle with March 27 are:

- Should the LCP allow for federal assistance in acquiring viewshed parcels?
- Is large-lot, 320-acre zoning preferable to 40-acre zoning combined with a growth allocation plan for new subdivisions?
- Should Highway 1 be a managed-access road with some controls on the number of motorists other than residents using it?
- How restrictive should policies be on prohibiting development within view of Highway 1?
- Should mining be prohibited, especially on Pico Blanco mountain?

Several organizations and even the Navy were represented during the hearings last week.

Rudd Crawford, representing the Ventana chapter of the Sierra Club, spoke against the growth allocation plan and 40-acre zoning. He called for 320-acre zoning to control development, an inventory of viewshed parcels and a clearcut set of policies on how the county will compensate landowners deprived of development rights.

Development credits were favored by the Natural Resources Defense Council Inc. Ann Nothoff, representing the national organization, also argued in support of 320-acre zoning, an inventory of viewshed parcels and federal assistance in acquiring development rights or fee title to land.

Federal assistance of any kind was emphatically opposed by James Josoff, representing Friends of the Big Sur Coast.

Laurie Dillon, a Big Sur resident and member of the Citizens Advisory Committee to the LCP, called for strong steps to protect the land against over-development.

Rod Holmgren, speaking for the California Coastal Task Force of the Sierra Club, called for policies to prohibit mining of limestone on Pico Blanco. He also said the county should not rule out federal assistance to compensate landowners with parcels in the viewshed.

A strong, objective policy against development in the viewshed both west and east of Highway 1 was urged by Saunders Hillyer, representing the Big Sur Foundation.

Lt. Timothy Biggins, representing the Naval facility at Point Sur, cautioned that the supervisors should not allow shoreline accesses which would bring the general public to the very boundaries of the facility.

The LCP, when finally approved by the state, will govern land-use decisions in Big Sur.

Point Lobos rehabilitation tops list

POINT LOBOS State Reserve has been placed at the top of a priority list for rehabilitation by the state Parks and Recreation Commission.

The commission on March 13 proposed that implementation of the General Development Plan for Point lobos be included in the priority list for projects to receive money from park bonds and from offshore oil drilling revenue.

Richard Felty, Monterey regional director for the Parks and Recreation Department, explained that the priority listing did not constitute approval of funds for work at Point Lobos.

The General Development Plan calls for relocating parking from the beach to another section of the park, with a shuttle for visitors to reach the beach, Felty noted.

"We don't have a schedule or cost analysis yet for the plan," he said.

The parks department will prepare a budget that will have to be approved by the Legislature before funding is made available, Felty explained.

The soonest that the budget for Point Lobos rehabilitation could reach the Legislature would be next year for implementation in the 1983-84 fiscal year, he said.

Fire district user fees face voters

BALLOT measures for user fees in local fire districts have been scheduled for the June 2 election.

A mail-in ballot will be used in the Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District. It proposes a maximum $100 annual fee for single-family homes; voters rejected a $199 fee last year.

Cedric Rowntree, a member of the fire district board, said the $100 fee would allow for a barebones budget with no reserve and an operating deficit of more than $9,000 over the next two years.

Ballot measures for user fees in three county service areas which provide fire protection around Carmel are also scheduled for June 2.

The annual fees for single-family homes in CSA 43 (unincorporated Carmel) would be $72, in CSA 42 (Pebble Beach) $104 and in CSA 39 (Aguajito) $73. All the proposed fees are considerably reduced from fees that were voted down in the service areas last year.

Bruce McClain, director of the county Public Works Department, said the user fees in the county service areas will only maintain existing services because of property tax cuts caused by passage of Proposition 13.

A two-thirds majority vote is required for the ballot measures to pass.

Errors sink CHS baseball team

By ELIZABETH SARET

THE CARMEL HIGH School frosh-soph baseball team was outmanuevered, outplayed and outcoached in ending its winning streak at the hands of the Monterey High junior varsity 6-1.

The Padres made a dozen errors and had several mental lapses. One example was on a ground ball to Carmel first baseman Jo Jo Ward who should have covered the bag himself, but threw instead to second baseman Tim Krebs who could not cover first in time. That was one of the mental mistakes that cost Carmel the game.

Marcel Danko had a double for the Padres. Mike Kelly was losing pitcher.

THE CARMEL HIGH GOLF team garnered a respectable third place in the Hollister Invitational in which 26 teams participated.

Robert Louis Stevenson School won top honors with a four-man total of 298. Harbor High School was second. Carmel had 310 strokes.

Carmel's best score was by Andrew Whitacre, who shot a 73. Brett Roseberry had 74, Dale Hendricks, 80, and Marc Vitolo, 83.

THE CARMEL BOYS' TENNIS team had its first match March 17, tripping Aptos High 4-3.

Rico deRouen played No. 1 singles, No. 2 was Olaf deRouen, No. 3 was Anthony Galang, No. 4 was by R.J. Marto and No. 5 singles was Trampus Shankle.

The doubles teams for CHS were Greg Brinton-Tristan Newbon playing No. 1 and Andy Robinson-Tony Rowedder No. 2.

The next matches will be on Friday, March 27, at home against Awlat and at home Wednesday, April 1, against Pacific Grove High School.

Coach Dave Channey said, "There will be a tight run for league. Our hardest match will be against Robert Louis Stevenson School."

THE FROSH-SOPH SOFTBALL team lost its first game to North Salinas 9-0 on March 5.

The Frosh-Soph team then nipped San Lorenzo Valley 4-3 March 10. Seaside High was trounced by the Padres 20-7 on March 11. On March 16 the Padres were pounded by Monterey 17-4. Jennifer Hinton was credited with a double and Tracy Chandler with three singles in that game.

Coach Ron Carter said, "We are a young team that is improving every week. The team should be very competitive in league."

The next games are away against Santa Catalina on March 27 at 3:30 p.m., at home against Robert Louis Stevenson March 31 at 3:30 p.m. and at home against Gonzales High on April 3 at 3:30 p.m.

THE CARMEL HIGH SWIMMERS defeated Robert Louis Stevenson 97-71.

Big winners for the Padres were Mike LaFontaine in the 200 individual medley and the 100 butterfly, and junior Bryan Baldwin, who took the 50 free and swam on both winning relay teams.

The frosh-soph match was decided by the final relay, with Carmel coming out on top 50-49.

Hospital groundbreaking

GROUNDBREAKING ceremonies are taking place today at Community Hospital for the 41,000-square-foot Outpatient Pavilion, shown in this artist's rendering. The public event was to have started at 10:15 a.m. Invited guests included state Sen. Henry Mello, Assemblyman Sam Farr, county Supervisors Michal Moore and William Peters and the mayors of each Peninsula city. The new building will consolidate most of the hospital's outpatient services. Cost of the project is estimated at $8.5 million. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy in about 18 months.

More credits required for graduation at CHS

STARTING WITH the freshman class in September, students going through four years at Carmel High School will be allowed to fail only one class and still graduate on time.

The Board of Education of the Carmel schools decided last week to increase the graduation requirements, beginning with the graduating class of 1985.

In a 4-1 vote, Trustee Ron Parravano dissenting, the board raised the graduation requirement from 220 units to 230 units. The action essentially reinstated the requirement for graduation that had been used before the 1980-81 school year. Cost of the increased requirement will be $9,400 a year for the next three years to cover the needed staff, officials said.

Parravano opposed the decision on the basis of the cost and also on what he said was an inappropriate process in reaching the decision. He argued that the board should have first allowed the School Site Council to review the proposal.

The majority of the board, however, insisted that it was appropriate to approve the new policy, while allowing the School Site Council to later recommend the specific additional courses that should be required to cover the extra 10 units.

The matter left unresolved was whether the 10 units should be completed in required courses or through electives.

Board Chairman Doyle Clayton elaborated the day after the meeting on the rationale behind the decision.

"We want students to take more of our program," he said.

"Students are there to learn. They should be there for a full day."

He noted that under the current 220-unit requirement, a student could essentially fail the equivalent of two, year-long courses and still have enough credits to graduate. Students are expected to complete six classes at 10 units each per year for four years, making 240 units the optimum.

"Students will now have to pass 23 of their 24 classes," Clayton noted.

The increased credit requirement was geared to all students, he said. It may mean added math classes, for example, for the college-bound student, while for the terminal student it could mean more units in business or vocational experience, he explained.

Water reclamation project races against budget ax

THE CARMEL SANITARY District hopes to spare its $13.7 million wastewater reclamation project from the federal budget ax by rushing through a portion of it.

Michael Zambory, general manager of the district, said last week that design of new ports on the outfall line in Carmel Bay is being expedited ahead of schedule. He said the district strategy is to complete the design in time to apply for a construction grant within a month, or before the federal cuts are approved.

"We hope to capture our complete construction grant by getting this little piece of it through before the cuts," he said.

At stake is $11.7 billion in federal and state construction grants, the bulk of which would be provided to the district by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The Reagan administration wants to cut $1.7 billion from the EPA construction funds.

If the cuts are approved, Zambory said, it could eliminate construction funding for the districts five-year-old wastewater reclamation plan.

The district has already received $1.1 million in federal and state grants for designing the project.

Zambory said, "We're rushing a portion of the project design to get our construction grant in for the modification of the outfall line."

He said the strategy is to secure the portion of the construction grant so that the EPA will not be inclined to withhold the whole grant.

"We figure construction on the outfall line in July," Zambory said, "so we'll be applying for the grant sometime next month."

The project would reclaim wastewater for use by local golf courses.

Free meals are offered to students in school district

FREE OR REDUCED-price lunches and milk are offered to students in the Carmel Unified School District.

Children from families whose income is within certain levels proscribed by federal criteria are eligible.

Application forms are available at the principal's office at each school. Superintendent William Rand said the information provided on the application is confidential and is used only for determining eligibility.

Foster children in some cases may also be eligible for the federally-subsidized benefits, Rand noted.

The director of community services for the district reviews and approves the applications. If parents are dissatisfied with the ruling, they can either discuss it with the director or make a formal appeal to the superintendent, Rand said.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the school should be contacted for a new application.

The program is available to families of all sizes, beginning with a student who is his or her sole supporter.

For a one-person family to be eligible for free lunch, the annual income must be no more than $5,700, and for reduced-price lunch, $5,701 to $8,350.

A family of five qualifies for free lunches with an annual income of no more than $11,800.

new arrival

Abraham Bard Sherman

Things have been a bit hectic in the Carmel Valley home of Bard and Barbara Sherman.

They welcomed their new son, Abraham Bard, on Feb. 13 — and four days later one of their other children came down with the chicken pox.

"It's really been hectic," said Mrs. Sherman, who had to take Abraham and vacate her home for a month. "I couldn't go home until all three of my other children were over the pox."

Baby Abraham was born at Community Hospital at 8:32 a.m. He weighed eight pounds, 12 ounces and was 21 inches long. He has brown hair and blue eyes.

His paternal grandparents are Hal C. Sherman and Roe Sherman of Carmel Valley.

His maternal grandmother is Mrs. Carol Thompson of Carmel Valley.

Abraham's dad is a carpenter, and his mom said she has her hands full caring for her four children — twin sons Noah and Jason who are 6, and 20-month-old Julianne — and Abraham.

Few here register to vote

MONTEREY COUNTY has the second lowest percentage of registered voters of any county in the state.

According to Ross Underwood, county registrar of voters, Monterey County ranks 57 out of 58 counties in number of those eligible who are actually registered to vote.

The county percentage of registered voters is 38.7, Underwood said, while the number one county in the state, San Francisco, boasts 92 percent.

The last day for registering to vote in the June 2 election is May 4.

Underwood said the low county figure was affected partly by the two large military bases, Fort Ord and Hunter-Liggett. The large number of military personnel eligible to vote, but who maintain established residences of record outside the county, casts an untrue image of the voter registration profile, Underwood said.

He said, "The Voter Outreach Commission has deep concerns that those persons of voting age will not be able to 'beat the system' until they join it.

"To the unregistered voter, we hope your sense of public spirit and patriotism will be aroused."

To be eligible to vote, a person must be 18 or older, a U.S. citizen, resident of the county and not currently on parole or imprisoned for the conviction of a felony.

Underwood said prepaid mail registration forms are available in more than 150 locations throughout the county. For the distribution sites or more information, phone the county Elections department, 424-7621.

Hatton Fields group wants land back

RESIDENTS in Hatton Fields have petitioned the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to approve the abandonment of a road easement at Atherton and Mesa drives.

Arthur D. McFarland of 26181 Atherton Drive noted in a cover letter on the March 5 petition that for nine years he has tended and maintained the portion of road right-of-way next to his home.

He said his care for the parcel included installing a sprinkler system, plants and a rail fence around it. He stated, "I have taken care of all this property as though it were my own."

McFarland asks that the parcel be incorporated into his private property.

The petition was referred to the county Public Works Department, where officials said last week the abandonment request would be reviewed and a recommendation made to the supervisors.

The supervisors in February approved a similar abandonment of a portion of the right-of-way at the northeast corner of Atherton and Lazzaro drives.

Parties, ponies . . . and don't forget St. Patrick

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

THINGS ARE definitely looking up!

With all the news how could any of us not be aware of the fact that Carol Burnett is having her day in court — taking a poke at the National Enquirer — and then up jumps Johnny Carson waving the same tabloid (via television) in our faces and giving out with a few strong words. Hopefully this column is only amiss on such things as calling very-much married Lester Henderson a bachelor.

And the social scene is rapidly returning to the norm with parties, visitors and the arrival of the ponies.

A BIT OF IRISH

It's an annual affair — and long before St. Patrick's Day rolls around, people start calling Red Lion owner Don Turner to see if the party is on.

And this year, as for the past 15, the party was definitely on — with more than 500 people trooping in to receive their generous servings of corned beef and cabbage — and to down a bit of Irish beer and Irish coffee.

To make sure that no one was left out, Don bought 120 pounds of corned beef, 100 pounds of cabbage, 50 pounds of potatoes and 50 pounds of carrots — and along with the kitchen crew, worked on the chow two days before the big event — using huge pots borrowed from the Youth Center.

Don really outdid himself this year. The Lion was beautifully decorated with streamers and shamrocks and live elfs and leprechauns made sure that everyone had a bit of the green.

So, if you were wondering why so many people were strolling San Carlos munching from paper plates . . .

POLO GAME AND FASHIONS

Carmelite Paul Lippman is at it again!

Paul, who owns talent and booking agencies in Carmel and Los Angeles, is co-chairman of the Western Professional Polo Championships Saturday, April 18 — featuring Hawaii vs. California. The big to-do will be at the Monterey Fairgrounds Arena, and with Paul behind the reins, it should be an affair to remember.

The fun will include a halftime fashion show titled A Ride Through History — and heading up these activities will be none other then Summer Bartholomew, Miss U.S.A. of 1975 and a runner-up Miss Universe.

Paul said the fashion show will cover every major period in history back to Adam and Eve — and that Summer plans a fantastic surprise.

Don Nyman of Carmel Valley will be one of the bad guys in the fashion show — dressed in black and riding a white horse.

AND THE WINNER IS . . .

More news from the Hays family!

Don and Maggie's daughter, Valerie, who lives in Freedom but spends a lot of time in Carmel, called to report that cousin Robert Hays just took first place in the Celebrity Race of the Long Beach Grand Prix.

Valerie said that the Celebrity Race was half professionals and half celebrities — all driving Toyota Celica stock cars.

She said Robert qualified at the end of the field and halfway around the first lap he had passed all the cars but one. On the second lap he took the lead car, led the race with a six-second margin and won with a three-second margin.

Robert, a frequent visitor to Carmel, is making quite a name for himself in the movie world — just recently wrapping up two more films — Utilities, which was filmed in Canada, and Take This Job and Shove It, filmed in New York.

IRISH JIGS AND ALL

Leaping leprechauns!

A true Irishman wears his colors — and such was the case at St. Patrick's Day festivities at the Pebble beach home of Dr. and Mrs. Gerard Martin.

Jerry and Mary invited many of their friends (including their tennis chums) in for a bit of a celebration including cocktails and corned beef prepared under the capable hands of John Romano, assistant chef at the Beach and Tennis Club of Pebble Beach.

Dr. Jerry's office is in Pacific Grove and the couple has lived in the area almost 20 years. They have four children, all of whom attended the get-together.

HOME TO CARMEL

Mrs. Lester (Anne) Henderson enjoys the best of two worlds — spending part of the year at her Cape Cod home and the rest of the year at her home in Carmel Woods.

She's currently in Carmel and has been visiting with her many friends.

Mrs. Stanley Worth entertained Anne at a poolside luncheon, and Mrs. Philips Finlay, Anne's long-time friend from New York, also entertained her at a dinner.

Another highlight of Anne's visit home was the recent trip to San Francisco with her daughter, Pam Mason, to see Katherine Hepburn in Westside Waltz.

Welcome Home, Anne!

A VISIT HOME

Jason and Lois Harbert of Carmel Valley are enjoying a visit with their daughter, Laurie, and her husband, Steve, and the couple's three children, Scott, Timothy and Cory, who are visiting from Palos Verdes.

Jason is a coach at RLS — while Steve coaches at Chadwick, a private shcool in Palos Verdes. Steve brought his baseball team up to play both RLS and Carmel High — and they're all bunking with the Harberts.

Steve's parents are long-time Carmelites Jim and Therese Hare.

Steve and Laurie are both Carmel High graduates, so they've been spending time with old friends as well as rooting for their team — and they're also enjoying Lois' cooking, especially her home-made pizza.

TYRA IS 18

Rites of passage!

One such event for Tyra Lee Jones of Carmel was the arrival of her 18th birthday — which was celebrated in grand style.

About 200 young people from Carmel and Carmel Valley hopped aboard the bandwagon and landed at The American Legion Hall in Carmel — and the fun was on.

Joan Brady of Divine Rites did herself proud with decorations for the Circus Masquerade — clowns, wall posters, balloons, streamers and a variety of mannequins and stuffed animals hugging every nook and cranny.

There was no lack of punch, potluck munchies and birthday cake, and local bands, USS and The See, kept things jumping — including former Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg and his wife who dropped by to see "what all the noise was about" and stayed around long enough to dance a few jigs.

Jim Hearn (who also has a band) arrived dressed in tails, top hat and cane while his date, lovely Jessamyn Fase, looked every bit the elegant lady in a long white dress. They came as "the Snobs."

Bill Hearn (on keyboard) came as a mime, and Garth Hatton wore a T-shirt with "I'm a Carmel Local" printed on it. John Harbert in Al Capone dress was swinging a guitar instead of a machine gun, and lead guitarist John Puccinelli shucked the whole idea and came in jeans and T-shirt.

A roaring fire in the fireplace, good friends, good music and plenty of food. Who says that a large group of local young people can't get together and have fun — with not one hint of trouble.

WOMEN IN MILITARY SERVICE

The Altrusa Club of the Monterey Peninsula held a special dinner at the LaPlaya Hotel on Monday, March 23. The affair was a salute to women in the military.

Speakers for the evening were Capt. Susan Rundell (Army), CTA-2 Phyllis Myers (Navy), 2nd Lt. Bonnie Heet (Air Force) and LC Jane Crite (Marine Corps).

The Altrusa Club, an international women's service club, was founded in 1917. The local chapter has about 25 members.

President of the local chapter is Mrs. David Eaton.

Chairman for the evening was Mary Catherine McHale.

Hollywood connections leave no time for illness

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

TOM BLEECKER of Carmel can never be classified as a quitter.

Young and talented, Bleecker has survived a lot of heartbreak over the past five years and is currently recuperating from a serious illness and a month-long bout with chemotherapy.

He said he has no intention of giving in to any of his problems and is now hard at work rewriting a script, with a copy already in the hands of his friend, Clint Eastwood.

Bleecker, who considers himself a jack-of-all-trades, has excelled in writing, producing and directing motion pictures, martial arts and has worked as a stand-in for actors William Holden and James Coburn and for three years was head writer for William Shatner of Star Trek fame.

One of Bleecker's close friends is movie producer-director Blake Edwards, whom he met while attending UCLA.

"I was on my way to med school but also very involved in martial arts," said Bleecker, who has a black belt in karate. "Blake was also into the arts and we met when I was teaching in Los Angeles."

Bleecker said he frequently worked out with Elvis Presley.

Edwards invited Bleecker to his home and asked if he would be interested in teaching his wife karate.

"My favorite movie (comedy) at that time was A Shot in the Dark starring Elke Sommer and Peter Sellers," said Bleecker. "Elke was my favorite actress and for some unknown reason I thought that Blake was married to her. When we arrived at Blake's home he disappeared for a few minutes and Julie Andrews walked in, introduced herself and took me on a tour of the house. I was wondering what she was doing there and she must have sensed my confusion because she said: 'I'm Blake's wife.' "

'People here have a tendency to get lazy and I did.'

FOR THE NEXT THREE months, Bleecker worked with Edwards and his wife, teaching them karate.

He said Edwards had to leave for film work in Prague and asked him if he would consider moving into his pool house and continue working with Miss Andrews.

"That's when my whole life changed," said Bleecker. "Blake had all of his films in the pool house and all of his scripts in the library — you can guess how I spent my time."

Bleecker said when Edwards returned he told him he had a great idea for a story and offered it to Edwards.

"He told me to write it," said Bleecker. "When I told him I wasn't a writer he told me to take a month and give it a try."

In six weeks Bleecker finished the script and said he was surprised when Edwards told him the script showed promise.

"He told me that I had what it takes," said Bleecker. "He also said that only one in a million who ever starts a screen play, finishes it."

In 1970 Bleecker met Edwards' daughter, Ginny, when she was home from London for Christmas.

Tom Bleecker works on a script

"She was 14 and I was 24," said Bleecker. "Through the years we kept seeing each other and one day she called me to have lunch with her. We fell in love at lunch, lived together for a short time and were married in 1974."

Bleecker's mother died in 1977, and he said one of her last requests was that he spread her ashes over a beautiful spot.

"I was a frequent visitor to Carmel and had many friends in the area," said Bleecker. "One of those friends took me up in his small airplane and I spread her ashes over Fan Shell Beach and 17 Mile Drive."

When his father died six months later, Bleecker returned to the same spot with his father's ashes.

A FEW WEEKS LATER Bleecker and his wife discovered that their 17-month-old daughter, Katie, had a heart condition.

"I felt as if I was going from one death bed to another," said Bleecker. "My wife and I were emotionally drained, and when I suggested that we move to Carmel, she agreed. Two weeks later we were living here — and I've been here ever since."

Bleecker said that he was an instant victim of "Carmel fever.

"People here have a tendency to get lazy and I did. I wore jeans and got into raking leaves, weeding, playing cards at Mortimer's in the Marina, cooking, beer drinking and beach walking."

Bleecker said he also grew a beard and took up C.B. radio — his handle being "Nashville Knight."

Trouble in his marriage then came because he and his wife did not have any energy left for themselves, said Bleecker. He said his wife wanted to get back into the movie business and was up for the lead in the movie "10."

"I understood her feelings," said Bleecker. "She was 23 and had a good career going. Our lives were going in different directions. She was determined to go back to Los Angeles and I was just as determined to stay here. So we separated for six months and then divorced. We're still very close friends."

BLEECKER recalled his first film work. He said that Edwards was making a movie called Wild Rovers with Ryan O'Neal and William Holden and that he was hired as Holden's stand-in and double.

Bleecker said he and Holden hit it off with a father-son relationship.

"My three months on that job was one of the highlights of my life," said Bleecker.

O'Neal was another story, said Bleecker. "It was shortly after Love Story had been released and O'Neal became an overnight superstar" said Bleecker. "It went to his head and he . . . was getting on Holden's nerves. Bill told Ryan that he thought he should change his attitude since he had been nominated for the Academy Award by his peers.

"Ryan sort of slumped down in his chair and thanked Bill and then asked him what ever happened to the award he won for Stalag 17. Bill looked up sheepishly and told Ryan that it was sitting in the bottom of the Bay in Naples — and with that we all came apart.

After Rover, Bleecker said Edwards gave Treatment filmed at MGM and staring James Coburn. Along with the acting, Bleecker said he also was Coburn's stand-in.

"Blake wanted me on the set so I could learn," said Bleecker. "It worked because I accumulated a wealth of knowledge on movie-making and also learned camera, sound, lighting and editing."

In 1973 Bleecker worked with Holden again on a movie called Breezy starring Clint Eastwood.

"Clint was also the director of the film and he was a delight to work with," said Bleecker. "He is extremely quiet and not in the least pushy or arrogant. He was always on time, got along with everyone on the set — a real professional."

'I was making more money as a writer and an actor than anyone I knew who had gone to medical school.'

During the years he was learning and working in the movie business, Bleecker said he continued with his writing, including various screenplays and a Movie of the Week for William Shatner. Bleecker said he and Shatner have also remained friends and own property together in Carmel.

During the filming of Wild Rovers, Bleecker met Clifton Ralke, who is now director of photography on Fantasy Island.

"We were both Sunday writers so we co-authored a script called The Justice of William Starks," said Bleecker. "Edwards also hired us as writers and we developed three major works for him. I was making more money as a writer and an actor than anyone I knew who had gone to medical school."

Bleecker said that the script which he co-authored with Ralke was shelved for a few years.

"Edwards said that it was a brilliant screenplay, but that people weren't ready for it yet," said Bleecker. "He said it was out of it's time, like the movie One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest. That one sat around for 11 years before Michael Douglas took a chance on it."

Bleecker said that six months ago he pulled the script off the shelf and rewrote it.

"It will make an incredible movie," he said. "Clint Eastwood is reading it and Fox also has a copy, so I'm keeping my fingers crossed. I'm hoping to have it in production by this summer."

Coping with his illness the past couple of months has set Bleecker behind in his work.

"I'm scrambling to catch up, but it's worth the effort," said Bleecker, who is happily settled in his Carmel home. "No matter where I travel I'll always consider this my home.

"I'm learning to live every minute of my life — and that means leaving time to rake leaves and walk the beach."

Planners pull switch on lights for city supermap

By BABS COROVESSIS

GOD MAY have said, "Let there be light," but the Carmel Planning Commission says no.

Or another way to say it is: Merv Sutton's supermap of Carmel gets to stay, but will be left standing out in the dark, according to the dictates of the commission, which voted on the issue Wednesday, March 18.

The commission, which has been several rounds with Sutton over the large illustrated map at San Carlos and Eighth, was turned off by lights proposed for the map and some of the exterior lighting in planter boxes proposed for the front of Sutton's store, Nielsen's Market.

Sutton, who was not at the meeting, said later he intends to appeal the matter to the City Council and was confident he would "get what we're asking for."

The market owner (and owner of the controversial map north of the store) said the old Leidig Texaco station map that was in that spot had a "bright light on it."

Sutton said he presented "low-key lighting" in his request. "The map is for the people to use," said Sutton. "We've nothing to gain by it at night. We're closed. But at times after 5 p.m., it is dark here. I think it was selfish of the city planners not to grant the request."

Sutton's landscape architect, Gary Girard, wrote to the commission that the intention "is not to turn the market corner into a carnival of night lighting." He requested sufficient light for night identification at the map.

Commission Chairman Robert Stephenson insisted there be "no light placed above the map board." Even with wash lighting coming from the building, Stephenson said, "I'm not yet happy with this."

Commissioner Arthur Mertens said that "illumination on that street is out of keeping with the street." If any lighting were approved, he requested it be turned off at a set time.

Commissioner Sandy Swain said the lights would be on a timer and that the lighting proposal was "not at all ostentatious."

Commissioner Donald Davidson said lighting the map "may be inappropriate." He said the goal was not to increase lighting downtown, and that the map did not need lights. "The map will serve its function with just daylight." he added.

Commissioner James Wright said, "I don't favor lighting the map, or the sign or whatever it is. Planter lighting is fine." Wright was referring to Sutton's request for a mixture of bullet lights and planter box lights, which the commission trimmed down to two and four, respectively.

In the first vote on the issue, six planter lights and no other lighting was approved 5-1, Commissioner Swain opposed.

Immediately after the vote, Commissioner Woolworth said she wanted to change her vote, so the commission reconsidered the issue.

Mrs. Woolworth said, "I feel the original motion was not abundantly clear to me, and I was not sure when I voted if one or two of the planter lights had been deleted or not."

In case Sutton were to appeal to the City Council, City Attorney George Brehmer suggested the commission vote on the lighting requests separately so that he could appeal only that portion in dispute.

Davidson asked, "What's the purpose of separating them?"

"Because they are like apples and oranges," said Mrs. Woolworth. "One is decoration and one is advertising."

"It lights up a corner; it's a total effect," Davidson insisted.

Finally, voting on the issues separately, commissioners approved four planter lights, limited to 75 watts, and two bullet lights, limited to 150 watts.

A motion for any lighting for the map was defeated 4-2, Miss Swain and Mrs. Woolworth in favor.

In other action, the commission approved:

■ Exterior alterations by Clint Eastwood and Walter Becker for the Hog's Breath on San Carlos and Fifth.

■ Exterior lighting, design and parking for H&M Associates (D'La Canada Lodge) on Dolores and Third.

■ Exterior design of storage area for Randal Swedberg of I Love Pasta on Mission and Fifth. The commission gave concept approval only, with a request that working drawings be resubmitted.

■ An exterior awning and window alterations for Paul Allen's Spencer's at Carmel Plaza.

The commission, sitting as the Board of Adjustments, approved:

■ A use permit for a bar sink for Ronald D. Kenzy of Monte Verde and Eighth.

■ A variance to allow a bar sink for William Bradford Dow of Forest Road and Second.

■ A use permit for a contractor's office in the R-4 district for Michael LePage, Junipero and Fourth.

■ A use permit for Jerry Winter, Monte Verde and Ocean, for an art gallery in the C-1-L district.

■ A variance for Marshall Hydron, Lincoln and 10th, for encroachment into a side yard setback. The board cut the height of an eight-foot trellis covering the deck of the hot tub area by three feet.

The board denied a variance to Margaret I. Pawley of Monte Verde and Eighth for additional building coverage.

Sunset Center terrace specifications are due

DESIGN DETAILS for the proposed $27,000 terrace at Sunset Center have gone to an engineering firm for specifications and will be let for bids and constructed "before the Bach Festival" in July.

The announcement was made by Richard Tyler, director of Sunset Center, during the monthly meeting of the Carmel Cultural Commission Monday, March 16.

The project has been given top priority since early February after the city retained Clayton Neill Engineering to design the terrace from concept drawings prepared in 1977.

Mrs. Tom Work donated $10,000 for the terrace construction nearly four years ago, and the city allocated about $17,000 more to meet estimated costs. It will be built at the north end of Sunset Center next to the main parking lot to replace an open concrete patio.

IN OTHER ACTION, the commission drafted a letter to the City Council requesting clarification on their meeting last month on donations to Sunset Center with interest accruing to the center.

The council said at that meeting that such gifts are pooled with other funds to get higher interest. Ultimately, through increased budgets, Sunset receives the money, albeit in a different form, the city said.

However, City Administrator Doug Peterson, who had not received the letter yet, said he intends to clarify the issue so that it is "settled for good."

The letter to the council also was to tell the council of the commission's satisfaction with their meeting and to hold the session annually.

The commission discussed the playwriting competition and noted that 514 plays had been submitted.

The commission also heard from the Committee for the Performing Arts in Carmel for Youth, which proposed a summer youth program at Sunset Center.

The Commission said questions on liability should be settled before space allocations could be confirmed.

Sunglass shop opens in Carmel

By FLORENCE MASON

DEE'S SUNGLASS SHOP
Tony and Dee Grant

The very fact of designer sunglasses may be news to some people — glasses by Norell, Diane von Furstenberg, Givenchy and others.

Such sunglasses are the raison d'etre for one of Carmel's newest shops.

Dee's Sunglass Shop is on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth. It is an offshoot of a business in The Barnyard where optician Tony Grant reigns; the new shop is Mrs. Grant's province.

The emphasis is on quality sunglasses, for which the Grants believe there is a fine market in Carmel. However, special purchases permit them to add something more to the description of their wares: " . . . at affordable prices." Top-line glasses are $38 to $60 and there are other lines beginning at $18.

The Grants have been in this area for three years, counting themselves among the fugitives from Southern California (Thousand Oaks). The tale is familiar: "We visited here for years and finally decided this was where we wanted to live," Dee Grant said. Their home is in Carmel Valley.

For most of the past three years, Grant has been a dispensing optician in The Barnyard (The Plaza Optician). It is a full-service optical business, including cutting and edging on the premises so orders for prescription glasses can be filled in a matter of hours.

Grant also offers soft contact lenses and carries an inventory of 200, so lost lenses can often be replaced immediately — a special boon for tourists. Another feature of the parent business is that "fashion tinting" can be done while the customer waits. Sun tinting, too, but fashion tinting goes beyond that to complement the appearance of one's eyes.

The Grants' daughter, Lynne Pentis, is following in her father's footsteps. She is an optician in Glendale while her husband is studying law at the University of Southern California.

Grant gets a change of scene and pace by playing tennis at the Carmel Valley Racquet Club. Dee Grant has a more sedentary hobby — knitting.

However, for both of them, and their daughter, the eyes have it; as a result, Carmel has an unusual new shop.

Mello pushes housing bill

State Senate Majority Whip Henry Mello, D-Watsonville, has introduced legislation to cut duplication of requirements for local affordable housing in the coastal zone.

"Existing state laws prescribe separate and often conflicting requirements for local governments to follow to provide and protect affordable housing along the coastline," Mello said. "This bill, SB 626, reduces unnecessary Coastal Commission review of local housing plans and development when the city or county already complies with the affordable housing mandate enacted by the Legislature last year."

Nine jurisdictions along the central California coast, including Monterey County, have submitted draft or final housing plans to the state.

Library architect chosen

mined.

IN OTHER ACTION, the board discussed funding for library operations.

Mrs. Faul noted that Monterey County's library system could not make its "fair share" $7,000 payment to the Carmel library this year.

Even though board Treasurer Gorey said the $7,000 would be made up through interest from investment, Mrs. Faul still expressed concern.

Her quandary was that Harrison Memorial Library contracts for only 49 percent of its services with the city of Carmel and 51 percent with the county.

If the board granted a pay raise (which it did later in the meeting) to its library employees to match the 4 percent Carmel city employees received, it would mean Carmel would pay for a disproportionate share of library services, Mrs. Faul said.

She also expressed concern that the "county never has any input at all in our budget. We hand them a bill for their fair share based on patronage," she said.

"What will happen when we go back to the county for our fair share again? They were not able to do it last year, and if they are not this year, are the taxpayers of Carmel willing to pick up that amount?"

Jo Childers, head librarian, said the county had received budget breakdowns in the past, but later said it did not want them.

The board approved a 4 percent raise retroactive to March for library employees.

Mrs. Faul said that because of the raise and the split funding from the city and county, the library board would need to "take a long look down the road at its financing. The county is losing money due to Proposition 13. They'll come back with less next year, maybe."

Gorey added that "we have to forecast how much we'll get from the county in order to do the budget."

The board also discussed book selection procedure. The board requested an updated list containing members of the volunteer Book Selection Committee.

The board discussed a letter to the editor in the March 5 Pine Cone criticizing the library. Mrs. Childers pointed out that the person who wrote the letter had moved from Carmel. She noted there is a box for receiving book purchase recommendations.

The board agreed to consider a request by Carmel Tomorrow to incorporate a historical museum in its library annex. Sybil Forrest offered $2,000 to the board for preliminary architectural planning for the museum.

The board will study the matter.

Fields are fertile in the lower 40

By BABS COROVESSIS

mile square plus

Dear Cleo,

The years turn backwards like a player piano roll on rewind.

It is spring and I am a young girl barefoot in Louisiana's clover, earnestly looking for the four-leaf variety to wish upon. And if perchance I find one, what shall I wish? To be grown up, of course.

Inside the house on daddy's bedside table is an ominous book, but I do not recognize it as such. It is about some silly, useless far-away event. The book is titled Golf After Forty.

Forty. By the time you receive this issue, the years will have accumulated their total, and middle age will have embraced me, its unwilling suitor.

Gloria Steinem, the editor of Ms. magazine, upon turning 40, was hurriedly told by a friend, "But you don't look like you're 40." The droll Ms. Steinem replied, "Dear, this is what 40 looks like."

I never bothered to take up golf, but still 40 came anyway. If I pull the auburn hair back, the temples show their graying signs.

So I guess 40 is when the gray hairs are numerous enough that you begin to look for silver highlight in the store instead of a cover-up color.

Forty is when crow's feet are mysteriously cloned on the face.

Forty is when you buffer it by musing about what 50 will be like.

Forty is when you wonder why they build stair steps steeper and make bikinis smaller.

But there are pearls that youth cannot wear.

In youth, I had so many questions and rushed out after the answers. Now some of the questions just drop away.

I have discovered while writing this that it is not youth's passing that is sad. Forty, like other spots, is a reflection pool where one gazes into one's life. The question is not, "Am I getting older?" The question that looms is, "Have I ever lived?"

My favorite writer, Cleo, is none other than a San Francisco psychoanalyst named Allen Wheelis, and his book, On Not Knowing How to Live is my philosopher's Bible.

There's nothing Freudian about it. No advice. No $60-an-hour stuff. It's just a man who puts into words what comes up when he stops at some point along the way and looks into his reflection pool.

I have never figured out if he has the answers, but I know he has the questions themselves disarmingly clear.

So what my friend Wheelis proposes are the things I wrap around myself on this day of the 40-year lap. They are food for the spirit; they are pain pills for the aging process.

He writes:

"How to live? Who knows the question knows not how. Who knows not the question cannot tell . . . Maybe it really is very simple: The way to live is to act. Maybe not knowing how to live means nothing more than being afraid to participate, pulling away to the side, watching life go by without taking that part in it which one would want to take were he not afraid . . . Absolute immunity is what I seem to want, and the price is isolation. Maybe not knowing how to live is nothing more than being willing to pay such an exorbitant price."

Wheelis quotes Cyril Connolly in the book, and Connolly's remark, "I am forced to admit that anxiety is my true condition, occasionally intruded upon by work, pleasure, melancholy or despair."

Wheelis' goal is clear: "Perhaps if I teach others what I know not, I may along the way myself learn." . . . What's important is to call out. Not for help, there is no help. Not in despair — what can anyone do but shrug, look away? But to give a signal. A gesture of love and humor to acknowledge drowning so others who drown will know they are not alone. We are all drowning; deny it with blindness, transcend it with laughter.

"Always and forever the student and still I don't know how. Are there no classes in living? Would someone take me as an apprentice? . . .

"Not knowing how to live is separateness, the division of the world into self and others . . . Knowing how to live is oneness with the world."

Hail and hearty days to you Cleo from your daughter in the mile square city of Carmel.

You may be 29 years my senior, but you and I and everyone are the same. Time is the equalizer, the leveler.

Forty is just one of those sharp slaps to a forgetful mortal. Now I understand why the last words of Queen Elizabeth were:

"All my possessions for a moment of time."

Carmel LCP faces state next week

CARMEL'S LAND-USE plan — the bulk of its Local Coastal Program — will come before the California Coastal Commission Wednesday, April 1, in South San Francisco.

The meeting will be at Grosvenor Airport Inn on the Bayshore Highway from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The commission will take up what was approved by the Regional Coastal Commission February 23. The regional commission approved most of Carmel's plan, except for the portion related to the undeveloped Patterson property at the foot of Ocean Avenue.

The LCP, when approved by the state, will govern land-use decisions in Carmel.

Chris Goehler, administrative assistant for the state commission staff, said the state recommends that the regional commission decision not be changed.

Officially, the city of Carmel is appealing the regional decision. The city wants a minimal amount (25 percent) of easement granted so that Patterson can build four homes on the 32,000-square-foot site. Under the regional decision, half of the property is protected from development by requiring a 50-foot scenic easement on the beach side and additional setbacks.

The meeting before the state commission is a public hearing. However, if the state decides to change any portion of the LCP recommendations by the regional commission, it would require an additional public hearing.

The fate of the LCP at the state level is in limbo because recent political pressure resulted in the Senate Rules Committee removing two persons from the state commission — Mary Henderson (who also was chairman of the regional commission) and Lois Ewen of San Diego, vice chairman of the state commission. Zad Leavy, a Big Sur lawyer, replaced Mrs. Henderson at the state level. George Shipp, a San Diego travel agent, replaced Mrs. Ewen.

Steelhead fishing

Dear Editor:

Your Feb. 26 article on steelhead fishermen on the Carmel River was worth reading and the problem understated.

I am an avid steelhead fisherman and have never before seen such disrespect for property, environment and fishery as I did during the last four weeks of this past season on the Carmel River.

The blame can not be placed on any one group of "locals" or "people from outside of the valley." Both were guilty to the maximum degree.

During my weeks of fishing on your river, I watched trees broken down, listened to obscene language being used around women and children and saw just about every fishing regulation broken. When I, or people I was fishing with, would try to do something to rectify the problems, we would receive physical threats or be ignored.

Finally, during the last two weeks of the season, we met some members of the Carmel River Steelhead Association and got some support in trying to stop the snagging and illegal taking of fish.

The river's excellent run of fish should be looked at as a resource to provide income for local businessmen, and I sincerely hope that the people of the area have learned a lesson in management from this year's disaster.

Col. Tyner praised

Dear Editor:

The passing of Col. Step Tyner is a great loss to all who live within County Service Area 43 (the fire district covering the unincorporated areas around the city of Carmel).

More than anyone else, it was Col. Tyner who spearheaded the group that fought strenuously for the establishment of the county service area, led the efforts for improved fire protection, more manpower and the construction of the Rio Road Station. His dynamic personality, wise counsel and shrewd planning have given the area the best fire protection possible. Not without good cause can the people of this area be thankful for being under the aegis of the "Cadillac" of fire protection districts.

When you need fire suppression or emergency medical services, remember the wise man who foresaw your need and did something about it.

The rural Valley

Dear Editor:

Carmel Valley is a rural area.

Some people apparently don't continue to appreciate this after they move here.

Carmel Valley Road is our main connection with the rest of the so-called civilized world. Along this road are many smaller roads, streets and even driveways. The speed limit on most of Carmel Valley Road is 55 mph. One cannot turn out of one's road, street or driveway and immediately attain the speed limit, nor can one turn into one's road, street or driveway at that speed.

As obvious as this may seem, every day I see people impatiently passing on turns and hills. These people aren't all rowdy types, either. Most of them appear to be business people, professional people and ladies hurrying to be the first to see the new spring clothes at Saks.

It usually takes me about a half-hour to drive from mid-Valley to Monterey and park. From the Village I would add 15 minutes. Leave on time, and if you don't, please don't ask the rest of us to share the risk you take in being late. Personally, I would like to see the speed limit on most of Carmel Valley Road lowered to 45 mph.

Just as Carmel Valley Road is not a freeway, neither is Carmel Valley the L.A. basin (yet, anyway). Please do not buy a house next door to a horse, cow, chickens or whatever, move in, and then start complaining about the noise, flies, smell etc.

If you want to live in a city there are plenty to choose from. Go live there.

Don't try to impose your questionable taste on your new neighbors.

High in the sky

Dear Editor:

Our airspace is no place for potheads, coke sniffers, speed freaks, junkies and plain old boozers.

Airplanes are lethal enough without flying under the influence of licit or illicit drugs.

Mindless accidents are increasing as a noisier breed of pilots take off into the wild blue yonder. Crashes are often preceded by bizarre aerobatics and wierd low-flying over helpless victims on the ground.

The FAA plays footsie with pilots by requiring only eight hours of drug abstinence before taking off. Winking at drug-related pilot error shouldn't be acceptable to the Reagan administration.

Research indicates drugs like marijuana or alcohol distort the flier's reflexes and time perception for 36 hours. Even circulated tobacco smoke in the pilot's cockpit can cause air disasters by impairing motor skills and judgment.

Now is the time for the FAA to clear its mind and see the connection between safety and the dangerous drug scene flying overhead.

Draconian measures are needed to make our frightful skies safer.

Capital punishment

Dear Editor:

As could have been predicted, a wail and a sob has gone up from the bleeding hearts over the execution of Steven Judy, given the electric chair for raping and murdering a housewife, then drowning her three children.

In his charges against capital punishment, one widely read syndicated columnist cried, "As a deterrent, capital punishment fails."

Well, have I got news for him! He is wrong, and he is just as wrong as wrong can be!

Because of capital punishment, Steven Judy will never, never, never murder again.

And brother, that's deterrent! Perfect, perfect, perfect deterrent!

Evils of tobacco

Dear Editor:

When I learned of the death of a friend from lung cancer, who had been a heavy smoker (the 13th in my acquaintance), I just leafed through papers and a magazine for diversion, since I could not concentrate on reading.

What attracted my attention? The most colorful and the most arresting pictures were advertising for cigarettes. This was true of The New York Times, the San Francisco Chronicle and Examiner, Monterey Peninsula Herald, and, believe it or not, The Atlantic Monthly.

I have canceled my subscriptions to all those. I take the local paper, The Pine Cone, and the Christian Science Monitor. Neither of those carries ads for tobacco in any form.

Most of the ads depict young people and are devised to attract them. If we subscribe to such, we, the public, are to blame for the increase in smoking among our young people, particularly girls. If a sufficient number of people ceased buying papers that carry such ads, the papers would no longer find it profitable to carry these glamorous full-page ads.

We all know the power of advertising in our culture.

MUD Squad disbands after 12 years

The MUD Squad, an adult organization that has been helping children in Monterey County for 12 years, is disbanding.

Dr. E.J. Stachowiak, MUD Squad coordinator, said the group is disbanding because of poor adult participation and failure of the Probation Department to allow the group to work with the children in Juvenile Hall.

The MUD Squad's final monthly potluck supper will be held Saturday, March 28, at 6 p.m. at 7 Yankee Point Drive, Carmel Highlands.

A scathing performance

By BEN

WELL, I'LL be cornswaggled!

Not only are they taking my good name in vain, but now they're trying to abscond with my logo!

Some weeks are just too much.

BOY, YOU CAN say that again!

That is, some weeks are just too much! First cornswaggling, then boondoggling! If it isn't one thing it's another.

Main cause for complaint is that this week was full up with my being in the wrong place at the wrong time (occasionally vice versa, too), but I sat through all the dull stuff, and missed the best fracases.

LAST WEEK'S (the second regular meeting) of the City Council was not too horrible, with the one excpetion being the rather uncharacteristic action of Helen Arnold, who attacked the mayor re: Roberts Rules of Order.

It was rather a scathing performance, but the worst part of it was that she was totally wrong. Worst part, because it means that she's slipping on doing her homework.

Seems, however, that she was big enough to apologize to Hizzoner, but, not in public.

Guess it takes a real big man to do that.

NOW, THIS WEEK'S special meeting was the one that I missed, and I hear that it was really something.

The house was packed, with standing room only, and heavily laden with "Pro-Dump the Ballot" audience members who, by all reports, contained faces that haven't shown up for a meeting in years, even a regular one. Wonder how they all managed to decide to turn out for this one? Of course, it couldn't have been promoted, could it? But it wasn't on the agenda, so what were they doing there?

Is it possible that the Gang of Four was afraid that they just might lose the vote if it went to the ballot?

THE THING that I don't understand is Howard Brunn.

He was such a big and vocal advocate of "it's always good to let the people decide." At least he was last fall when it was voted by the council to put Piccadilly back on the ballot.

What happened, Howard? Are you thinking of next year's election? I think that you made the wrong decision.

AS I understand it, a lot of people who voted "yes" on the first vote, definitely changed their minds after the purchase price was revealed. A BIG difference! It's one thing to pay $5,000 for a new car, even if needed, and another to pay $9,000 for that same car a year later. Especially if you don't get any trade-in value!

Somehow, we just manage to hold the old Tin Lizzie together a bit longer with chewing gum — and we still get where we're going!

Plans for youth progress

By BARNEY LAIOLO

JUST LAST WEEK, the Recreation Committee met with representatives of the Carmel Youth Center.

This was the remaining entity to which we had to present our plans and to discuss with the Youth Center group where they would fit into the picture.

After a good discussion and presentation of the facts, it was agreed that we would have one more meeting with the Youth Council of the center. It plays a very important part in setting policy and youth requests for the group.

As soon as we have their ideas we can put the total program into a presentable form that can be forwarded to the Carmel Unified School District, the Carmel Foundation and the City Council as well as any other entity which would like to cooperate. It has taken more time than expected to assemble all the facts, but hopefully we will make this presentation very soon.

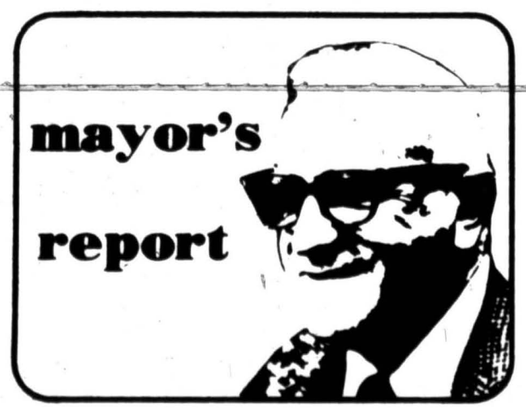
DOUG PETERSON, Andy Anderson and I have been busy with the study of the library annex and parking situation.



We will be in a position to pass on the results of this study soon.

AT THE LAST special council meeting March 16, mention was made of "leadership and guts."

As I see it there has to be a cooperative spirit of all members for leadership to take hold.

As for "guts," I stick to my convictions and it's seldom, if ever, that I change my mind.

The Piccadilly Circus

By AL EISNER

THERE ISN'T ANYTHING that will get a newspaperman more upset than watching public officials skirt the law by meeting secretly or stealthily to accomplish their goal without adequate participation by the public.

When the City Council voted 4-1 at a special meeting March 16 to discard plans to hold an election (to let the people decide once and for all whether purchase of the Piccadilly Nursery site on Dolores for $400,000-plus is a good idea) I think it was a prime example of such action.

Constant readers of this column don't need another exposition of the events that led to their tainted action last week. Despite the soothing assurances from individual members of the council that "I know what's best," and "I've talked to a lot of people" and "Let's stop fooling around and make a decision on this matter," there are many, many people in Carmel who were shocked, bewildered and appalled by their precipitous action.

And, their actions were probably illegal. Let me explain.

The California Legislature enacted the Brown Act long ago to make certain that public bodies (city councils, boards of supervisors, planning commissions, etc.) behave themselves, and not legislate behind closed doors.

Chummy get-togethers in dimly-lit bars by a majority of a city council became illegal. Proper notice has to be sent out to assure that opponents and supporters of controversial measures can have their day in court, and, of course, to help the legislators make their decision.

The Brown Act has been amended and strengthened through the years as public bodies doggedly tried to get around the law.

The intent of the Act was spelled out in its preamble: "In enacting this (law), the Legislature finds and declares that the public commissions, boards and councils and other public agencies in this State exist to aid in the conduct of the people's business. It is the intent of the law that their actions be taken openly and that their deliberations be conducted openly.

"The people of this State do not yield their sovereignty to the agencies which serve them. The people, in delegating authority, do not give their public servants the right to decide what is good for the people to know and what is not good for them to know. The people insist on remaining informed so that they may retain control over the instruments they have created."

I believe the action by the City Council March 16 violated the spirit of this section of the Act.

Section 54956 of the Act states: "A special meeting may be called at any time . . . by delivering personally or by mail written notice to each member of the legislative body and to each local newspaper of general circulation, radio or television station requesting notice in writing. (The Pine Cone has made that a standing request.)

" . . . The call and notice shall specify the time and place of the special meeting and the business to be transacted. No other business shall be transacted at such meetings by the legislative body."

I believe the action by the City Council violated the spirit and the letter of this section of the Act.

The City of Carmel has some rules in its own municipal code that govern such matters. Under City Council Rules and Procedures (Section 201), this wording appears: "At any special meeting the city council shall act only on matters referred to in the notice or consent of such meeting."

I believe the action by the City Council violated the spirit and the letter of this section of our own Code.

Section 211.1 of the same Code states: "Requests for reconsideration of a matter already acted upon by the Council will not be placed upon the agenda of the same Council unless a change of circumstances is made apparent or new facts and information presented . . . "

I believe the action by the City Council violated the spirit and the letter of this section of our own code.

What "change of circumstances" was made apparent? None. What "new facts or information" was presented? None.

Listening to a tape of the meeting, it is quite clear that the four members of the council were dragged kicking and screaming last October into agreeing to hold an election in the first place. The matter had become very controversial. A poll of our readers showed overwhelming opposition to purchase of an empty lot while other, important social needs remained unmet.

So, after the furor died down, and without adequate notice to the people who might be opposed, the council pounced. It was a sly maneuver.

City Attorney George Brehmer, who said last week that he might have erred by allowng the Council to take up a new agenda item at the special meeting, now says that there was sufficient "overlap" on the two questions. (The published agenda item was "To establish June 2, 1981, as an election date for the sale or retention of Piccadilly Nursery."

Overlap? I think it takes a mighty big stretch of the imagination to see a strong relationship between the two questions. They are clearly separate issues.

The clumsy power play — accompanied by the hastily-summoned claque of noisy supporters in the back rows — was transparent to almost everyone at the meeting. Their minds were made up before the meeting ever started.

Assurances from the councilmen that "they really are in touch with the public and they know what they want" smacks of small-town totalitarianism. If the council does not reverse its action, the members ought to be severely censured.

If you agree, let them know. Now. In writing.

Carmel Valley High School scores special victories

By STEVE HELLMAN

"OPENNESS, trust and caring" is the motto of Carmel Valley High School.

Those words describe the atmosphere at the special school where victories are scored against more than math quizzes.

It is a school without vandalism, officials said. There is no attendance office. Students come and go at will. Teachers are able to give individual attention to students. Self-motivation is the watchword. The ultimate punishment for violating school rules is being told you cannot come back.

Principal Jim Kohnke, with help from his students and teachers, treated the Board of Education of the Carmel schools to an in-depth presentation on the school last week.

The board members met in one of the two rectangular, stucco buildings that comprise the school, located down a long driveway off Schulte Road. Outside the buildings, a chain-link fence separates the grounds from backyards of uncut grass, chicken coops and other rural appurtenances familiar to Carmel Valley.

'They didn't like Carmel High School. This is something for them — a second chance.'

But inside the buildings, the sights are not so familiar for a school. A magazine rack sits at one end of the room, two revolving paperback racks stand along one wall, a maze of snapshots of students covers another wall and filling the room is a charming assortment of furniture in the modern odds-and-ends style.

"THIS IS A DIFFERENT sort of school," Kohnke told the board members.

"You can't compare it to Carmel High School. We don't have bells, buzzers and periods."

What the school does have in its two-year history, Kohnke pointed out, is a high success rate in turning around students who had not been motivated. He said the students all have to take the district's proficiency tests and that the scores have been among the top.

"Students cannot really succeed unless they feel good about themselves," Kohnke told the gathering of about 25 students, parents, administrators and board members. "Our school is an environment that offers the thing everyone needs — acceptance."

Enrollment has climbed to 46, with four teachers and a "house mother." Students range in age from 16 to 21, most of them rebounding out of the "regular" high school where they may have been isolated, outcast or bored.

Kohnke noted that Carmel Valley High School expanded last year from only one teacher, an aide and a dozen students to its present operation with an annual budget of $141,000.

The staff members are: Kohnke; Blake Fuessenich, social studies; Richard Hilton, English and physical education; Bruce Stannard, physical education and math, and Rosemary Brodrick, secretary, aide and "house mother."

The curriculum has a full range of general academic subjects, crafts classes from batik to macrame, vocational electives from auto repair to typing, recreation from chess to table tennis and four foreign languages.

"This is a continuation school," Kohnke said. "But all the bugaboos you can imagine about 'continuation' are not true here."

The name Carmel Valley High School was chosen to dispel the bad connotation of a continuation school, Kohnke said.

The whole idea and success of the school rest on simple, basic factors, he said. Individualized teaching is combined with self-initiative among the students and only three main rules are required to play: A student has to generate a certain number of credits, has to attend regularly and behave.

"We don't have a lot of funny little rules," Kohnke said. "The punishment for misbehaving or poor attendance is removal from the program.

"It works, because most students don't want to be removed."

JOHN TESTA II, a 19-year-old student, presented a slide show of several field trips and activities.

The slides were taken on a fishing trip to Ano Nuevo island, a tour of Alcatraz, a trip to Point Lobos and a volleyball game.

One student remarked during the pictures of the Alcatraz tour that a shot showing San Francisco was taken from "a place called the 'torture spot' because it was where prisoners would walk by and see the city."

Freedom and the responsibility that comes with it are what make the school tick, Kohnke said. He noted that students do not have fixed schedules, but are requried to put in a certain amount of time each week to receive the required credits. Attendance is recorded by a timeclock where students punch in and out on cards.

Quarterly reports on students are given to parents. For students who have jobs, the school's flexible classes are ideal.

Testa described his reaction after coming to the school from Carmel High School, where he was having problems.

"You come down here, nobody's pushing you," he said. "You're given a chance. You have adult responsibilities."

At Carmel High School, he said, "Nothing interested me." He now spends about 15 hours a week in class at Carmel Valley High School.

"There are more real people down here," he said. "All my concentration is now on school. I see there's so much more you can do besides minimum requirements."

TESTA'S FATHER, John Testa of Carmel Valley, recalled the change the school made in his son.

He said, "My son was very negative. He's finally come out of it.

"If it wasn't for this school," the senior Testa said, "a lot of students would be lost. They didn't like Carmel High School. This is something for them — a second chance."

Mary Cater's daughter has attended the school since September. Mrs. Cater said it had also made a change for her family.

"The few rules, the simple discipline, punching in, knowing what's required or you won't be allowed to stay — it's all very good," Mrs. Cater said.

"My daughter has a happy feeling about observing the rules. It's a great relief."

April Hayes, a 17-year-old student, said she liked the way in which the students get along, and the special contact with teachers.

HILTON, who teaches English and creative writing, said the one-to-one dialogue with students makes the difference.

"I used to be frustrated, teaching 137 students," he said. "I've learned an incredible amount from the way we do things here."

One student, who gave her name as Soroya, said some classes are conceived by students. When the hostages were taken in Iran, she said a class was formed under the social studies heading to study the issue.

"We take ideas from the newspapers. Many times we suggest what it is we want to learn," Soroya said.

She noted that a student council was formed this year — of which she is a member — to advise the teachers and administration on changes and needs.

Carmel Valley High School also formed its own School Site Council this year.

"We're for real," Kohnke said.

ADVANTAGES OF BUYING A HOUSE

The decision on whether to rent or buy a home is one that eventually confronts almost every family. If this is your case, here are a few thoughts to consider.

First, an equity (cash value) is built up as you pay for the home over the years. And, its resale value can increase greatly (as has been the case in recent times) with rising real estate prices.

Also, property taxes and mortgage interest can be deducted from income taxes. This can be a sizable tax deduction, especially during the early years of the mortgage when about 90% of the monthly payment represents interest on the loan. Rent, on the other hand, cannot be deducted from anything but the checking account.

When you own your own home, there is no fear of a raise in rent; your monthly mortgage payments remain the same for the life of the mortgage. Finally, where else can you find an investment that you and your family can live in while its value increases?

THESE TWO RIDERS are among 60 other scarlet-coated riders and their sleek horses that will race against time over brush jumps along the 17-Mile Drive in Pebble Beach on Saturday, March 28, at the 23rd annual Hunt Race Meet and Steeplechase.

Steeplechase brings equestrians to Pebble Beach

Imagine more than 60 scarlet-coated riders and their sleek horses racing against time over brush jumps along the 17-Mile Drive in Pebble Beach.

This kind of action may be seen Saturday, March 28, at the 23rd annual Hunt Race Meet and Steeplechase along the spectacular Bird Rock Course. It'll be colorful, too — several horse and rider combinations will be racing in their hunting pink jackets.

The correct term for the scarlet hunt jackets is "pink." They are worn only by accredited members of a recognized hunt; other riders wear black jackets with beige breeches and black hunting boots.

Hunts from Pebble Beach, Los Altos, Santa Inez and West Hills will compete this year.

The first race of the day, the Hill Topper Point to Point, will begin at noon with teams of riders leaving the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center and racing four miles through the forest to Bird Rock. Following this at 2:15 p.m. is the Signal Hill flat race for juniors.

The Pace Setter, a two-mile course over Bird Rock for qualified men and women riders, will begin at 2:30 p.m. The Bird Rock Steeplechase for women is scheduled for 3 p.m.

The last race of the afternoon — the Spyglass Hill Steeplechase — is the most difficult and is the featured race of this event. It begins around 3:30 p.m. over a three and one-half mile course of aikens and coops (types of jumps). For the first time, the winner will be given a replica of the Del Monte Gold Cup for permanent possession, and the original cup will go on display at The Lodge.

Preceeding the Spyglass Hill race, at 2:45 p.m. there will be an exhibition of Jack Russell and hunt terrier types to be judged by Patrick Ellis, huntsman of the Los Altos hunt. Those interested in exhibiting their terriers should contact Jeannette Rettig at (415) 851-1159.

Comic relief is provided by the Shetland Pony Race at 3:15 p.m. which matches equestrian skill against pony power. The green grass of the one-sixteenth mile course creates an additional rider frustration as the little beasts are more likely to grab a bite of grass than gallop toward the finish line. This race is ridden in "unusual" attire, as ponies are likely to dump the riders right into the mud.

A champagne brunch sponsored by the United States Equestrian Team Committee will be Saturday at noon. The brunch will be served in an enclosure "race side" with an excellent view of the finish line of the Steeplechase races. Reservations for the $35 benefit may be made by phoning Mrs. Gretchen Hill at 624-0207.

Spectators who do not attend the luncheon may simply park their cars along the 17-Mile Drive or Bird Rock parking area. There is no charge, but the $4-per-car gate fee into Del Monte Forest will be in effect.

For further information, phone 624-2756.

Horse Show is this weekend

Western and English style horsemanship will be witnessed at the Annual Spring Horse Show of the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club Saturday and Sunday, March 28-29, at the club's grounds on East Garzas Road in Carmel Valley.

The 26 English riding events will be Saturday and the 27 Western on Sunday. Bernice Conner of Napa will judge the competition which begins at 8 a.m. each day.

This show has been approved by the California State Horsemen's Association and Region X of that organization.

English and Western points counting towards awards by both organizations will be given, as well as show Hi-Point awards.

A noon lunch break is planned both days, and a snack and beverage bar will offer refreshments.

To reach the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club, go up Carmel Valley Road for 11 miles, make a right on Boronda Road, and a left on East Garzas Road. The club is at the end of East Garzas.

Admission is free and parking is plentiful. For further information, phone 372-9005.

Masters of Guitar series

Guitarist Joseph Bacon to perform here Friday

Joseph Bacon will perform a lute and guitar concert Friday, March 27, at 8 p.m. at Sunset Center Theater, Ninth and San Carlos, Carmel.

The concert is the second in the Masters of the Guitar series presented by Richard Spross.

Bacon, the son of the distinguished American composer, Ernst Bacon, studied guitar with Andres Segovia, Ida Presti, Alexander Lagoya and Julian Bream. A San Francisco native, his broad-based background includes a bachelor of arts degree from Stanford University and a master's degree from Harvard University, both in philosophy; exhibitions of his paintings and sculpture, and intensive study of classical Indian music with Ali Akbar Kahn.

The artist has become a leading authority on the musical literature of the lute, a rare and complex instrument. He has taught on the faculties of the University of Oregon, Mills College in Oakland, California State University at Hayward and the Music and Arts Institute of San Francisco.

He has performed in concert in London, New York, San Francisco, Edinburgh and many other cities throughout Europe, the United States and Canada.

High critical acclaim has followed Bacon's concerts.

"Mr. Bacon is a serious and sensitive musician who plays with a mellow tone and fluent technical control," wrote a critic in The New York Times.

The London Daily Telegraph praised his "rare appreciation of sixteenth century music," and in the Glascow Herald, it was written that "Bacon, throughout the evening, played with a fluency, rhythm, and confidence which would have been a credit to any concert platform in the world."

In addition, Bacon will offer a performance workshop for interested guitarists Saturday, March 28, from 10 a.m. to noon and from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Bingham Room of Sunset Center.

Those wishing to audition for this workshop should phone 624-0630 for information. Fee for participation in the workshop is $30; $10 is charged to audit it.

Admission for the Friday evening performance is $10 for reserved seating and $6 at the door.

Advance tickets are available at Bartlett Music, Carmel, The Record Cove, Monterey, Do Re Mi Music, The Barnyard, Carmel, and Gadsby's Music, Salinas.

Flamenco guitarist Juan Serrano will present the third concert in this series on Friday, May 1.

For further information, phone 624-0630.

Jamesburg Players whoop it up this weekend

The Jamesburg Players will open their production of Neil Simon's Sweet Charity Thursday through Sunday, March 26-29 at 8:30 p.m. at Hidden Valley Theater, Ford and Carmel Valley roads, Carmel Valley.

A matinee performance is planned for 2:30 p.m. Saturday, March 28.

Sweet Charity was first produced in New York in 1969 and is said to be loosely based on a Fellini movie. The music is by Cy Coleman and the lyrics by Dorothy Fields.

The original production starred Gwen Verdon as Charity and was directed and choreographed by Bob Fosse. Sweet Charity was subsequently made into a movie starring Shirley McLaine.

The story revolves around the adventures of Charity Hope Valentine, a girl who "believes in love." She works as a dance hall hostess at the Fandango Ballroom in New York City along with seven other hostesses. They are all suffering the "indignities of the crummy joint," or, as one of them so aptly says, "We don't dance, we defend ourselves to music."

The story begins when Charity is pushed into a lake in Central Park by her current boyfriend Charlie. They are "engaged to be wed the minute his own marriage breaks up."

In her travels, she bumps into international movie star Vittorio Vidal, gets trapped in an elevator with Oscar Linquist, a "nice accountant with claustrophobia," shares her joys and woes with the girls at the ballroom, and in the end, winds up back in the lake. But Charity, the eternal optimist, lives "hopefully ever after."

The Jamesburg Players were founded by John and Linda Prejean, former members of White Oaks Theater Repertory Company. Ms. Prejean also sang at the Wharehouse in Monterey for two years.

This is the seventh show of the Jamesburg Players, a community theater group which supports The Jamesburg School, a small private school in Upper Carmel Valley. Proceeds for this show go to teaching salaries, books, supplies, equipment and a building fund.

Linda Prejean stars as Charity, John Prejean plays Vittorio Vidal, Michael Halton plays Oscar Lindquist, and the dance hall hostesses are Laurie Brandt, Elizabeth Mitchell, Marge Ingram, Nancy Cannon, Martha Aldrich, Melanie DeDomenico and Peggy Heneks.

Appearing in cameo roles and the chorus are Gordon Kramer, Herb Scherman, Steve Brown, Raz Belleci, Paul Ingram, Tom Clark, Mark R. Himelrick, Clem Savoldi, Mike Vijoen, Sean McCallum, Joan Hindman, Laura Hindman, Barbara Woods, Paula McPherson, Elaine Peters and Laura Calinas.

The band includes Bob Phillips on piano, Buddy Jones on bass, Lynn Wetzel on flute, Grant Rosen on clarinet, Jake Stock on sax and clarinet and James Newvo on drums.

Future performances are slated for Thursday through Sunday, April 2-5, at 8:30 p.m. with a 2:30 p.m. matinee on Saturday, April 4.

On closing night, Sunday, April 5, the tickets are $15, which includes a champagne and a no-host bar following the show at Fox Hill in the Carmel Valley Inn. Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers will provide the music.

Tickets are $6 Thursday, Friday and Sunday evenings and for the Saturday matinee. Tickets are $8 for Saturday evening. They are available at the door or in advance at Wills Fargo Restaurant, Sandi's Fashions, The Village Bookstore and Carmel Valley Natural Foods, all in Carmel Valley, Bartletts Music in Carmel, Lily Walker Music in Pacific Grove, The Record Cove in Monterey and Gadsby's Music in Salinas.

For information on the availability of closing night tickets, phone 422-1433.

'Gaslight' continues at Studio Theater

Gaslight, a gripping mystery thriller set in turn-of-the-century Boston, will be staged Thursday through Sunday, March 26-29, by the Studio Theater/Restaurant on Dolores Street south of Ocean Avenue in Carmel. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m., Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and 7:30 p.m. on Sunday.

The demoniac plot revolves around Mr. and Mrs. Manningham. Under the guise of kindliness, the handsome Mr. Manningham is torturing his wife into insanity. He accuses her of petty aberrations that he has arranged himself, and since he tells her that her mother died of insanity, she is more than half-convinced that she, too, is going out of her mind.

While her diabolical husband is out of the house, a benign police investigator visits Mrs. Manningham and proves to her that her husband is a maniacal criminal suspected of a murder committed 15 years ago in the same house. The game uncovering the necessary evidence against Mr. Manningham begins.

The cast features well-known Studio actors and actresses Kate McEldowney, Robert Tidwell, Jim Webber, Florence Mason, and Irene Morris.

Dinner is served one hour before the performance. Prices for dinner and show are $16 Thursday, Friday and Sunday, and $16.50 Saturday. Admission for the show alone is $7 all evenings.

For further information and reservations, phone 624-1661.

'Misalliance' to play through April 5

Misalliance, a 1910 comedy by British playwright and Nobel Prize winner George Bernard Shaw, will be staged Friday through Sunday, March 27-29, at 8:30 p.m. in Carmel's Indoor Forest Theater.

Shaw's story is set in a middle class country estate in England, where a successful merchant (John Tarleton) lives with his wife, daughter (Hypatia) and son.

Hypatia's fiance (Bentley) is visiting them. Hypatia is obviously fickle and foolish and Bentley, although intelligent, is a raw coward.

Into their midst comes a sputtering airplane along with its pilot (Joey Percieval) who turns out to be an old school chum of Bentley, and a Polish woman acrobat (Lina Szczepanowska).

The pilot falls for Hypatia's charms, and the Polish acrobat inspires all the gentlemen, including Bentley, to declarations of love.

Throughout the action, Mrs. Tarleton seems to keep the household together with aggressive ease.

A talented cast has been brought together for this production. Thomas R. Sanchez plays Bentley, Jeff Hudelson plays Mr. Tarleton, Gwyneth Hovick and Leslie Robinson alternate in the role of Hypatia, and Loel B. Shuler plays Mrs. Tarleton.

Adam Lembeck plays the son, Johnny Tarleton, Dick Bird plays Summerhays, Bentley's father, and John Brady plays Joey Percieval.

Barbara Shuler plays Lina Szczepanowska, and Stephen A. Moorer plays Gunner, a poor and wretched clerk.

To accomodate their large audiences, The Staff Players has extended the closing date of Misalliance to April 5.

Tickets are $4.50 general admission and $2.50 for students and seniors, available in advance at all BASS outlets. A limited number are available at the theater on performance night. Reservations are suggested.

The Indoor Forest Theater is located at Santa Rita and Mountain View in Carmel.

For reservations and further information, phone 624-1531.

Joffrey II Dancers met the challenge

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

THEY CAME to see the Joffrey.

Sunset Theater was packed Monday night, and though the recent public television broadcast of the Joffrey company boosted ticket sales to a sellout, it was the legend of this premiere American institution that had to be experienced. Of course there were those who came to see Ron Reagan and to get that vicarious touch of royalty.

What they got was the Joffrey II Dancers, the training company for the Joffrey Ballet. They also got a rich and varied program and plenty of excellent dancing featuring polished execution of some difficult routines.

Though the printed program was changed due to recent injuries ("knees, feet and hips," according to manager Frank Lackner), the effect was not diminished. Instead of the balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet, was Monotones II, the original half of Frederick Ashton's 1965 trio ballet to music by Satie. The familiar Gymnopedies were danced, in white costumes and caps, by Lael Evans, Michael Hudson and Reagan. Miss Evans was stretched like a puppet and spun like a top between the two men. Her agility was remarkable and the movements contrasted between graceful poses and easy animation. The interplay was more like the creatures in a tidepool than the images on a Grecian vase that supposedly inspired Satie. While Reagan was not a flamboyant dancer, he exhibited extraordinary balance, poise and timing, perfect for Monotones.

Before that was Unfolding, the strongest piece of the evening and an impassioned exchange between four couples, deployed now in pairs and then in quartets of men opposite women. The women were equal partners and the center of attention when in couples. When the eight were divided into quartets, the men clearly dominated the women and indulged in identity crises replete with the aggressive trappings of insecurity.

The costumes were of orange and umber, the lighting warm and the leaps and lifts as demanding in quality as in quantity. Not only were the physical requirements of strength and balance of the utmost, but the piece, danced to two fine works by Martinu, was long and unrelenting. The company rose to the occasion with unflinching singleness of purpose.

Unfolding was the newest piece of the evening, created in 1980 by Gray Veredon. Opening the program was Marjorie Mussman's Random Dances, a sequence to keyboard jazz variations by Jonathan Hancock that matched its name perfectly. The mix of stock classic, calisthenics and modern routines, with occasional tangents into humor and tenderness, was a dancer's delight. It was a treat for the balletomane and probably not forceful for those who sought a "program." It was an excellent cleanser of the palate and, in mostly white costumes often with colorful warmup attire, a tasty, if lengthy, hors d'oeuvre.

Septet by Stanley Zompakos concluded the concert. It was danced to two movements from the Septet in D Minor by Hummel. The elegant, largely classic and gently whimsical piece called on — you guessed it — seven members of the company. Not without its own rigors it remained light and delectible.

THOUGH NEXT season's Festival of Dance is still waiting to confirm its fourth attraction, the other three are now in place.

The Parthenon Dancers of Greece will come to Sunset Oct. 26.

On Jan. 26 a Pavlova Celebration will feature Starr Danias of the Joffrey Ballet.

And on Feb. 21 it will be the exciting Alvin Ailey Repertory Company.

CELLIST HANNAH BRICKMAN, an accomplished student of Janos Starker and past participant in the Carmel Bach Festival, offered a duo recital with Hidden Valley Music Director Stewart Robertson last Saturday afternoon at Monterey Peninsula College.

The benefit concert attracted an enthusiastic audience and witnessed an ambitious program that was as uneven as it was varied.

The main events in the hefty program were the Sonata in A, Opus 69 by Beethoven and the Sonata in D (a transcription of the Violin Sonata in G) by Brahms. While there were many moments of free cello flight, the overall effect was marred in both cases by errors (intonation flaws in the Beethoven, the same in the Brahms plus memory lapses) with pianist Robertson kicking in a few unwritten notes.

The impression, however, was that Miss Brickman lacked the depth of recital experience that ensures the unseen extra measure of protection. She certainly displayed the primary ability, the ambition and the impulse to sing. But more than occasionally her back was, as they say, to the wall.

Still, we cello fans may be grateful. No one has offered such a program here for years. I don't know of any other local player here for years. I don't know of any other local player who would attempt it. Furthermore, the program opener and closer were given all the virtuosity they demand.

Gaspar Cassado's transcription of a Frescobaldi organ toccata was a pyrotechnical show-off piece whose playing by Miss Brickman was bold and brilliant. Pampeana No. 2 by Ginastera, one of three such titled works, proved another virtuoso affair set to Argentine rhythms and employing solo cadenzas with the virile sound of numerous open strings. The Ginastera was an exciting conclusion to the program and replaced earlier doubts with full-blooded confidence.

Miss Brickman's tone production was a continuing concern. When she played solos (mostly in the Ginastera) her tone was revealed as ranging from a snarling high compass to a resonant low. But the articulation was not the same. The edgy top was invaluable with the piano, but the middle and lower ranges were in trouble without that bite.

As an encore, Miss Brickman and Robertson offered Prayer by Bloch.

New teppan service at Ginza

Expert chefs will now prepare teppan-style steaks and seafood right before the eyes of the patrons at the tables of the new Teppan Room of The Ginza in Monterey, K. Nobusada, a partner in the traditional Japanese restaurant, has announced.

The Teppan Room, a former banquet room, has been set aside for the special service of Teppan Yaki cuisine.

This new service becomes a show in itself as the chefs stand behind the octagonal tables, preparing the teppan-style steaks and seafoods and serving them hot off the grill.

The Ginza has been serving traditional Japanese cooking for 25 years. The new teppan service will be at dinner and for special lunch or dinner parties. The regular lunch and dinner service will continue as previously served.

The Ginza is located at 136 Olivier St., near historic Old Fisherman's Wharf. For reservations, phone 375-5264.

Yacht Club race is Sunday

Backgammon

by Alfred Sheinwold

THE EXTRA BLOT

You, White, roll 6-2 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it? (Since you doubled a few moves ago, the doubling cube is on Black's side of the table.)

You must, of course, bear a man off with the six. The only question is how to play the two.

Do not bear a man off the 2-point. Move from the 3-point to the 1-point.

If you are not hit, bearing off one additional man will make no difference. If you are hit on the 6-point, you don't want another blot in your home board. You may be obliged to hit Black's blot when you re-enter the board; and Black may then hit the blot on your 2-point (if you leave one there).

The danger arises only if Black hits you on the 6-point, you hit on his 4-point, and he then hits you on the 2-point; but there is no reason to take even this slight risk. Black will redouble if he gets two of your men back; and you will have to resign.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send 50 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Arts and sports need not be at odds

By RICHARD TYLER

IN THE UNITED STATES, the arts and sports are often considered to be at opposite poles.

Incompatible. Night and day. Black and white. On the surface, that might seem true. But in essence those two realms of human experience have more in common than not. Artists and athletes suggest that the arts and sports might have the following in common: creativity, entertainment and the participants' striving for excellence. Both art and sport in their purest forms seem to be borne of the very best of the human spirit. Gymnastics is a good example of a sport that balances on the fine line between arts and sports. The gymnast must be creative and is extremely concerned with esthetic, graceful movement. And, always he is striving for physical perfection and perfection of movement.

Patrice Whiteside, principal dancer for the Oakland Ballet, said the difference between arts and sports is that "sports is usually competitive against a clock or point while in dance we're not competing for anything except to reach the highest artistic level — that is more of a personal thing." At the same time, she said esthetic qualities are an inherent part of athletic activities. Gymnastics and diving provide prime examples. But dancer Whiteside can also find a certain amount of beauty even in a rough-and-tumble game like football. "I enjoy watching, from a dancer's point of view, a beautifully connected pass," she said. "When the quarterback throws andplayers leap into the air, when someone sprints to make a touchdown, all dancers appreciate that kind of coordination."

While it is true that the experience of filing into a theater to await a performance of The Nutcracker is somewhat different from standing in line hot dog and beer in hand outside the Oakland Coliseum to see the Raiders butt heads with somebody, it is also true that certain undeniable complementary relationships exist between the two performing disciplines.

PITTSBURGH STEELERS' wide receiver Lynn Swann is known around the National Football League as the guy who, among other things, danced one-on-one with Gene Kelly.

But then that shouldn't be too surprising, since in addition to being a top-ranked pro-football player, he is also an accomplished amateur dancer.

While growing up in San Mateo, Swann danced for 14 years, from fourth grade until graduating from college. Though he has concentrated on tap and modern jazz, he also began practicing ballet while playing football at USC in the early '70's.

As in football, Swann can compete with the best in dance. Last June he danced with Peter Martins of the New York City Ballet and Twyla Tharp, a noted choreographer who heads her own dance company, on a network television special program called Omnibus. The dance he performed with Martins, choreographed by Tharp, was called, appropriately enough, The Wide Receiver. It consisted of dance moves that correlated with the moves football fans are more accustomed to seeing Swann make on a football field. And, of course, he also danced a little soft shoe with the famous Gene Kelly.

What, besides injuries, do dance and football have in common? According to Swann, both disciplines demand flexibility, coordination, timing, rhythm, balance and overall body control. Despite these similarities, however, it is understandably rare that the dancer and football player can exchange roles.

"There are some fundamental differences between the physical build of a football player and a dancer," said Swann. "In dance you've got to have strength and power; but in football, because it is a collision sport, you need more muscle and weight, depending on your position. Defensive backs, quarterbacks, wide receivers, running backs and maybe a few linebackers are the only players who might have the right body size for dance."

Anybody who's had the opportunity to get close to one of the walking mountain ranges who play football's interior line positions can understand his exclusion from this eligibility list.

"But beyond physical factors," said Swann, "the two vocations share a particularly common ground — the need for exceptionally extensive preparation to achieve proper execution. To be a professional dancer, especially of ballet because it is such a highly disciplined art form, requires years of intense training just like a professional sport."

Though Swann lamented, "As the years progressed in my life, I cut back on dance and concentrated more on football," he said that if he devoted as much time and energy to dance, we'd know him as Lynn Swann, professional dancer.

While football-related injuries prevented him from taking dance lessons this past year, Swann managed to fill that void for the time being by serving on the board of the Pittsburgh Ballet. It is reasonable to assume, however, that we'll see him back on the dance floor this coming year. Anyone for tennis?

JOSEPH BACON, concert lute player and guitarist, will appear in recital at the Sunset Theater on Friday, March 27, a 8 p.m.

Bacon is a native of San Francisco and son of the distinguished American composer, Ernst Bacon. He studied the guitar with Andres Segovia and Julian Bream. Through his interest in the lute, Bacon has become a leading authority on the musical literature for this rare and complex instrument. He has performed in concert in London, New York, San Francisco, Edinburgh and many other cities throughout Europe, the United States and Canada. High critical acclaim has greeted his concerts.

His program here will include works for lute by Dowland, Byrd, Milan, Huwett and da Milano. Works for the guitar will feature such composers as Aguado, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Granados and Barrios.

In addition, Bacon will hold a performance workshop for guitarists and the public at Leonard Carpenter Hall in Sunset Center on Saturday, March 28, from 10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m. For additional information, please call 624-0630.

AN EXHIBIT of watercolors by Robin Gregory Casillo will be shown in the Marjorie Evans Gallery from April 16 to May 14.

Mrs. Casillo, a Peninsula resident, started her serious art study at Carmel High School and at Monterey Peninsula College. She continued to study independently while traveling to Hawaii and other parts of the United States, confirming an affinity with watercolor painting.

While free-lancing in the graphic arts in 1977-78, she attended Laguna Beach School of Art. Upon returning to San Francisco, in 1978, she began full-time employment as a graphic artist, continuing to paint and produce several commissions for private collectors. In 1980 she returned to the Monterey area and began to exhibit paintings in exhibitions. A short trip to the Orient and, again, Hawaii generated a new enthusiasm toward dynasty artifacts and a rediscovery of the forms and glazes indigenous to Eastern cultures.

Her work recently with local artist Sam Colburn has helped in her development of a more competent personal technique.

The Marjorie Evans Gallery is open free each weekday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

New Zealand wines bring taste of paradise to American shores

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

IT WAS ABOUT 10 years ago that an enthralled American tourist said of New Zealand, "It's like stepping back in time 30 years, to the good years of life."

Others called it truly "the land of milk and honey." Nature's grandeur is on a scale of incomparable majesty.

In the alpine region of Milford Sound, hundreds of waterfalls tumble crystal clear water from melting glaciers into meadow and forested borderlands, to easily accessible skyblue lakes. South Island or North, Queenstown, Christchurch, Wellington or Auckland, the slogan was the same for everyone: "A quarter-acre, half gallon, Pavlova — Paradise!" It meant, land for home and flower-filled garden, beer-a-plenty, the national fruit, the kiwi. (Kiwi is also the national bird, the long-beaked, insect-grubbing bird that doesn't fly, and what New Zealanders call themselves.)

For first-timers, it seems much the same, South Island or North, cities of no more than 300,000, no traffic problems, no snakes, no poisonous weeds, four seasons with seashore, mountain trails, ski slopes, plus good local beer and wine.

In this country of amazing statistics — 3 million people, 65 million sheep, 312,000 people in Queenstown with 200,000 bicycles, 95 million gallons of beer annually consumed, and 7 million gallons of wine from 12,000 bearing acres of vines, produced by 120 bonded wineries in four growing regions. Only 10,000 cases of New Zealand wines are currently exported to the United States. But that will probably be changing; there are some real winners, priced right, that are certain to give stiff competition to German, French, Spanish and Italian imports, and show even California winemakers how varietals like the Muller-Thurgau hybrid of Sylvaner/Riesling can be made seductively good, and Cabernet Sauvignon can be made light and still satin-smooth.

WE TASTED our first New Zealand wines about six or seven years ago at an exposition in Los Angeles.

They were nothing short of dreadful. Produced mostly from French hybrids, the whites were high-acid thin, to the point of being almost caustic. The reds had zero virtue beyond their color, which was less than jewel-bright.

But that is all changed. Winemakers are quick to acknowledge the assistance, in both field and cellar, from University of California at Davis Professors M.A. Amerine and H.F. Guymon. The move into 20th century techniques, with the hallmarks of stainless steel, temperature-controlled fermentation, centrifuge-cleaned musts and sterile bottling lines, has made heroic changes.

Dr. Helmut Becker, director of the Institute for Vine Breeding at Geisenheim of West Germany was recently in Auckland congratulating New Zealand grape-growers and winemakers on their progress and pointing out to them their "tremendous potential for the future." Germany and New Zealand share similar problems of cool to almost too cold climates, both being on the 50th parallel. Both countries, he also pointed out, have summer rains. With such indigenous attributes, white wines will be light, delicate, low-sugar with low alcohol.

Pioneer vintner Alex Corban told us, "This is a country that grows things well. Our farmers are Mediterranean and North European in origin, with the will and desire to create something good. With our cool climate wine country, we can make white wines that are lovely, light and seductively charming."

Ninety percent of the production is in white wines today. Corban's new winemaker, Norbert Seibel from Mainz, who installed and choreographed the new, advanced winemaking technology, proudly declares the Corban wines to have the lowest sulphur-readings of any wines on Earth! "They are the most healthy wines you can drink," he said.

Four Corban wines in American distribution as of this writing are well worth seeking. Each is under $5 and all that we have promised in the above. Corban New Zealand Liebestraum is not highly prized by local wine writers, but we found it to be charming, inexpensive and certainly virtuous to anyone enjoying a medium-dry table wine of Rhine/Mosel style. We move into greater distinction with the New Zealand Sylvaner-Riesling — light, dry, refreshing. The Corban vintaged New Zealand Chenin Blanc is a crisp, clean dry wine of charm and balance, not bitingly dry, making you take the second swallow to believe it's for real, from this newest of emerging winelands. Corban Cabernet-Pinotage is a totally new experience in red table wines being light, satin smooth, with interesting breed. The Pinotage is a hybrid developed in South Africa from Pinot Noir. Blended with Cabernet Sauvignon grown in this cool climate, it has unique, non-monster attributes, meaning an inviting charm accompanying foods at mealtime. It "drinks good," to put it into a humble vernacular!

Someday, we hope, the hotel and restaurant industry of New Zealand will find helpful professionals like Amerine and Guymon of viticulture and enology to help lift tourist comforts to a 20th century level. They've lots to learn in just plain basics, like frying eggs in butter instead of grease. In this land of milk and honey, with good butter and 65 million sheep, we never had a well-prepared serving of lamb! "The Lord sends meat, the Devil sends cooks." But as Alex Corban said, these are people "with the will and desire to create something good."

There are no more gracious people on the globe, friendly, warm and hospitable. The minister of tourism has his work cut out for him.

When the changes happen, however, this South Pacific Paradise will be on an excitingly new and profitable path toward making tourists' dreams come true.

Artist Ferguson's life is as interesting as his art

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

"BARCLAY should be cloned. Everyone should have one.

"That's how my mother describes Barclay and she's absolutely right," said Lady Harriet Ferguson. "He's always happy, always moving and constantly thinking up exciting endeavors."

Ferguson does have the appearance of an impish elf. His electric white hair and neatly trimmed black and grey beard go well with his hazel eyes and gentle smile. And his heritage is obvious in his Scottish brogue and his title — The Right Honourable, The Viscount Ferguson of Lamond.

The title was bestowed in 1978 when he ascended to the Jacobite Peerage for furthering the cause of Scottish Art. He was given a warrant to form his own brigade, designated Lord Ferguson's Royal Warders.

Chatting in animated happiness, Ferguson shows no sign of his recent five-way, bypass heart surgery. He said he has never felt better, and is now trying to enter a new period by working in watercolor, a medium which he hasn't worked for 30 years.

Born in St. Andrews, Scotland, Ferguson said he first became interested in painting as a child.

At age 18 he entered the Royal Air Force as a volunteer pilot-navigator-bombardier. After release from the service four years later, his love of painting drew him to the Glasgow School of Art, where he received a degree in drawing and painting.

He next traveled to several countries including Italy, Austria, Spain and France and was with the aircraft industry as a technical illustrator. In London he had been a graphic artist.

Married with two children, Ferguson moved his family to Montreal, in 1954. He held a number of jobs before becoming art adviser and chief illustrator for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., a government position which he held for 10 years.

"It was during that time that I divorced and my mind turned to painting," said Ferguson. "I decided it was time to travel and decide what I really wanted to do with my life."

So being a man of action, he went to San Miguel Allende in Mexico and took a master's in fine art at the University of Guanajuato. He then returned to his job in Canada, but a short time later a heart attack changed his life.

"I just told myself that I could give up or I could do something important," said Ferguson. "I gave up all the benefits of my job, my pension — everything! So I packed my things and came directly to Carmel."

SHORTLY AFTER his arrival in Carmel, Ferguson said he met Peter Pierson, then art director of the Pacific Grove Art Center.

"Peter left the job to teach at Seaside High School, so I filled his position at the center," said Ferguson. "It gave me the opportunity to meet the art community, but I felt that I was losing money because I wasn't painting."

Devoting himself full time to his painting soon had its rewards. Within a year he won first-place awards in contests at the Northern California Competitive, the Monterey County Fair and the Monterey Museum of Art.

"I've gone through numerous periods in my work," Ferguson explained. "From painting old Victorians to my 'box period,' for which I am most recognized in this area."

He said people were fascinated with his boxes. "I painted boxes because I love boxes," he said. "Many people think I'm trying to tell a story about the environment, but it has nothing to do with that. My first idea came when I painted an empty lot — and then filled it with thousands of boxes and bottles."

Two years later, Ferguson said he began to feel "boxed in." He said he was beginning to feel that he needed to be back in the center of life.

"What better place to find plenty of life than New York," he said. "I rented a loft and went into what I call my 'cast iron building period.' I held my first one-man show and it was during this period that I received recognition as a national painter."

One painting, City Hall Flag, was selected for the American Bicentennial Commission Exhibit, The American Flag in the Art of Our Country.

In 1976 Ferguson returned to Carmel for what he considered a long overdue vacation.

'I saw this leprechaun dressed in a kilt jump over my back fence. He came roaring into the house, introduced himself and invited me to his party.'

He arrived in late December, rented a house and began planning his annual New Year's Day party.

"I knew I was only going to be here for one week, but I wanted to get all my old friends together," said Ferguson. "I didn't realize that I would also be meeting my future wife."

Describing her first impression of the man who was to become her husband, Mrs. Ferguson said:

"I saw this leprechaun dressed in a kilt jump over my back fence. He came roaring into the house, introduced himself and invited me to his party. I accepted, but also ended up inviting him over for cocktails that evening — within a week we were in love."

Ferguson gave his version of what happened next.

Barclay Ferguson's Blowing Bubbles, 36 by 48 inches, painted in 1978.

"I returned to New York, but found myself writing her love letters like a teenager. I couldn't concentrate on my work and my phone bills would have supported a family. She wouldn't leave Carmel so I just dropped everything, my art, everything — and came to her."

The couple bought an old Comstock home in Carmel and turned it into a studio. They painted the outside lavender, purple and fuschia and called it The Bank and Tractor Co. In explaining the name of the studio, Mrs. Ferguson, who is also an artist said: "With his Scottish brogue, Barclay is often misunderstood on the telephone — so the Barclay is for 'bank' and Ferguson as in 'tractor.'"

They were married in 1978 with a traditional Scottish ceremony on the lawn at Del Monte Lodge in Pebble Beach. The bride was led through a passage lined with white balloons — symbolic of sheep's bladders — a sign of good tidings.

SOME of Ferguson's favorite paintings are from his game and tin toys period.

"I was browsing through an antique shop and found a book on tin toys," he explained. "I bought the book and started my own collection — then I started painting them."

He said he has no hobbies, but does enjoy walking five miles daily. "My work is really my hobby," he said. "It's a profession where you never cease growing — where you're always striving. I feel that I'm ready to go into something new and it will probably be landscapes and seascapes.

"I've also invested in a lot of good, young artists. As for myself, I just want to keep painting and enjoy life."

Plant Society plans Toro Park outing

Wildflowers of a variety of plant communities will be identified in an outing of the California Native Plant Society Saturday, March 28, to Toro Regional Park. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Carpools will leave the Cinema 70 parking lot at Del Monte Shopping Center in Monterey at 8:30 a.m., or participants will meet leader Lee Dittman at 9 a.m. at the parking lot at the south end of the Sycamore Group Area, the innermost parking area of the park.

This walk will be moderately difficult, but it will start out easy for those who only want to walk for one to two hours.

Bring a lunch and water if you'd like to continue on over hill and dale to a scenic lunch spot in the back country. The wildflowers of the grasslands, streamsides, oak woodland, chaparral and scrubland will be discussed.

For further information, phone 372-7476.

Norman sculptures unveiled

The Monterey Conference Center Art Commission announces the unveiling of a sculpture by Emile Norman Thursday, March 26, from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Portola Lobby of the Center, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey.

The sculpture was made possible by a grant from the Bing Crosby Youth Fund and the Maurine Church Coburn Charitable Trust.

Reservations are required. For reservations and further information, phone 646-3770 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

CONTE DRAWING FOR PICNIC by North Carolina painter Harrison Rucker is included in a one-man show of his work to open with a reception from 5-8 p.m. Saturday, March 28, at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth Avenue at Mission, Carmel. Rucker is noted for his romantic style "in the tradition of the Old South."

Romantic Old South comes alive in Harrison Rucker paintings

Paintings of nudes by Harrison Rucker, a man who "paints in the romantic tradition of the Old South," will be on view Saturday, March 28 through April 18 at Zantman Art Galleries, Sixth Avenue at Mission, Carmel. Everyone is invited to attend an opening reception, March 28, from 5-8 p.m. at the gallery.

The North Carolina artist was introduced to Zantman audiences last spring. All of the paintings in that show were sold in a very short time and a waiting list developed, so the artist was asked to present another show this year.

The paintings of Rucker may be described as "exquisite nudes in dappled light." The figures have a languid quality that is sensuous and refined at the same time.

Rucker applies his paint in a unique way, projecting shimmering illusions of translucent veils and mists, sparkling mirror reflections, and transparent glass. The opulent nudes are surrounded by and seen through these iridescent lights and shadows, which create an intriguing and mysterious effect.

In his early adult years, Rucker was a successful commercial artist with his own advertising business. He had always dreamed of being a painter, though, and in 1969, when he was 39, he gave up commercial art and began to paint full time.

The first years of his new career were predictably rough financially, but they served to crystallize the style and direction of his work.

He has now attained widespread recognition and found success and satisfaction in his second career.

The internationally-known Hammer Galleries of New York have exhibited Rucker's paintings since 1974, the New York Graphic Society has included his work in their catalogue Old and Modern Masters, and the Collector's Guild has commissioned him to produce a lithograph for its members.

The gallery is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

For further information, phone at 624-8314.

Museum of art seeks docent volunteers

Those who have a basic knowledge of art, have taken an art history course or equivalent, or have a desire to learn about art may now apply for a volunteer docent position with the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Applications are being accepted for a training period of four scheduled Mondays beginning April 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at the museum, 559 Pacific St., Monterey. The first meeting will include a coffee party and a tour of the museum's galleries, and active docents will be present to explain the training periods and the activities of the program.

Docents attend previews of the museum's monthly exhibitions and meet with the artists to learn about their techniques and art backgrounds. Writing, researching, and teaching programs at the museum and staffing two of the museum's community projects, Museum on Wheels and Creative Response, are also docent activities.

For additional information about the training and duties of a docent, phone Lu Neustad, docent chairman, at 625-1546.

Father Farrell's wisdom

Marriages made in heaven deserve a gold star

By the Rev. LARRY FARRELL

Invocation at the Carmel Rotary Club, Ladies Day, Feb. 11.

Oh almighty and eternal God, we humbly ask thee as our loving Father to bless all Rotarians gathered here and be pleased to bless the food we partake and the drink we quaff.

We know that in your paternal solitude no thought of theirs is left unguarded, no tear unheeded, no joy unnoticed.

Recently, a Rotarian told me his wife was the light of his life. I told him that these words had a nice poetic ring like a St. Valentine's Day card. Seriously, he said that before his marriage he lived in a kind of physical and mental darkness. "My wife not only brought me out of darkness, she forced me to be a light."

There are various types of light; the artificial light that gives us a headache. There is the blinding light that frightens robbers. There is the limelight that some men demand and some wives give them. My Rotarian friend said that his ideal wife was none of these. Rather, she was a good and godly woman, a giving person and that she had taught him to share.

Oh Lord, help us to bring that kind of light and love to each other; husband to wife, wife to husband, friend to friend and even to our enemies.

In last Sunday's paper there was a quote from the Argentinian Nobel Peace Prize-winner Adolfo Perez Esquievel: "No one can sow seeds with fists. To sow seeds one must open one's hands."

In my long life as a priest I have met many arguments for celibacy, but once in awhile I encounter a marriage made in heaven. I pray to God it is yours. If anyone feels he qualifies, come up and see me and I'll put a gold star on your marriage license, presuming, that is, that you have one.

Amen.

In Celebration of Wood

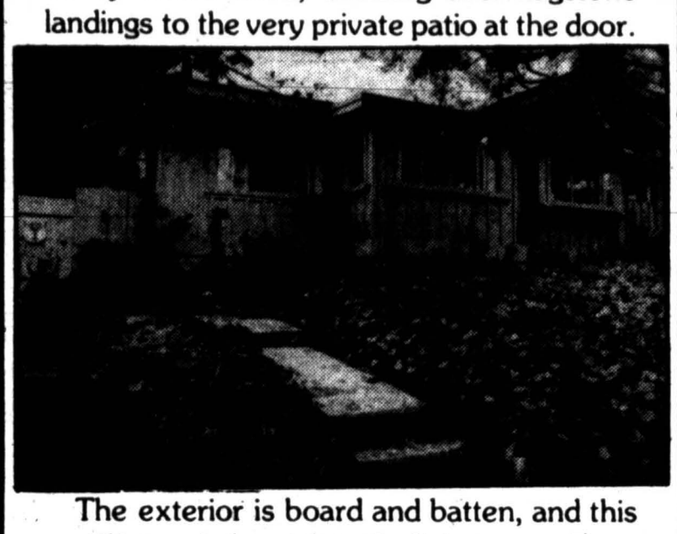
The house nestles under a profusion of small, well trimmed oaks along Junipero Avenue, just where it makes a dip south of 10th. It sits well above the street and is reached by wood stairs, climbing over flagstone landings to the very private patio at the door.



The exterior is board and batten, and this motif is carried over into the living room. Even the chimney breast is board and batten, singularly appropriate in this vintage Carmel cottage.

Redwood beams and planks top the irregularly shaped living room. A square dormer pushes out at the south, and another deeper windowed nook forms a dining alcove at the east. A single shelf suitable for plates, mugs, vases and knick-knacks encircles the room at chin height.

Two bedrooms and two baths break off a wood-walled corridor opening at the living room's far end. One of these is also board and batten, with beamed ceiling and a broad, deep-silled window. Its bath, across the hall, matches in all respects, almost a miniature suite.

The master bedroom at the end is paneled in mahogany, as is its somewhat larger bath. Ceilings here are broad planks, painted to contrast with the rich brown walls. Skylight in the bath makes even dark days bright.

The kitchen, a model of efficient planning, is behind the living room and looks out over a series of patios and luxuriant planting. On sunny days it's a delightful breakfast and luncheon setting. Again, the kitchen is walled and roofed in wood planking. Just beyond this is a small service room, easily large enough for washer and dryer.

About 50 feet behind the house and up a stone walkway is a totally charming 3-room guest house, almost a miniature of the main building. Again board and batten, again wood paneled walls and ceilings, again the charm that is uniquely Carmel. Living room, bedroom and bath — all complete, all quaint — ideal accomodation for long or short term guests.

If you've been looking for an "only in Carmel" place, this is it. Beautiful condition. Lots of closet space. Intimate, warm and cozy. $225,000.

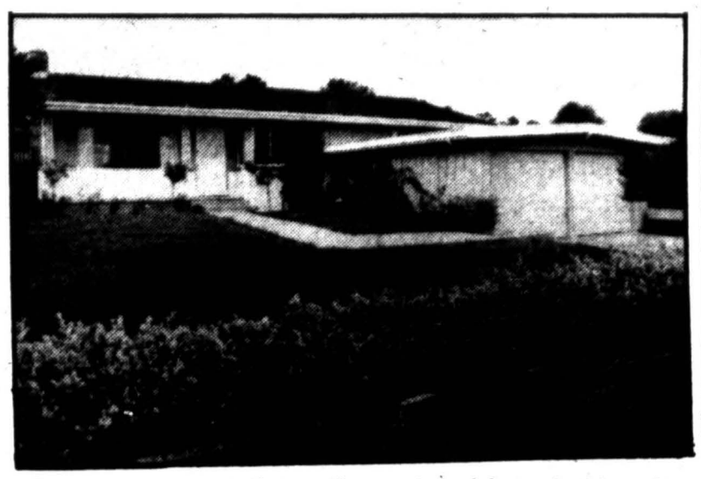
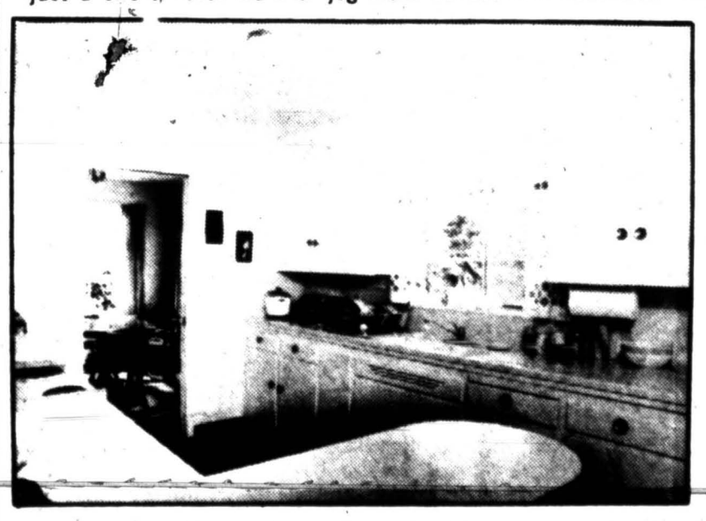
A level Stroll Away From Beaches And Mission



In a sunny area on the southern edge of Carmel, this redwood, shake-roofed home is only a four-block stroll from Carmel River Beach, just six blocks from Carmel Beach and the Mission and only a block from River School. A railing and lacy pillars of wrought iron enhance its front porch approached by a path bordered by a lawn, also flowerbeds featuring a variety of roses, fuchsias and bougainvillea.

A picture window capturing view of the Fish Ranch hills, paneling around a stone fireplace an a gleaming hardwood floor are found in the living room. Similar flooring is a feature of the bedroom in the master suite, also two more bedrooms and the hall leading to them and a second bath.

Corner casement windows overlook the rear garden in the attractive dining space extending from the living room. The same kind of windows are in other rooms and increase the charming aspect of this meticulously maintained home just a short, level walk or jog from sunsets and the sea.



The kitchen with ample counter and cabinet space extends beyond a breakfast bar into a laundry area, also contains a door which opens to a paved patio with a stone barbecue in the large, fenced back yard which also has a lawn and beds for growing flowers and vegetables. A double garage adds to desirability of this home in sparkling condition and equally suitable for a young family or older persons.
